Flaming Explosion Kills 8 and Traps 50 Within Mine

TWO DECAPITATED
BY FALLING MOTOR

Timbers 'Just Rain' Following Blast; Store Is Rocked a Mile Away.

GRUNDY, Va., April 22.—(AP)— Eight bodies were reported to have been recovered tonight from the explosion-wrecked Red Jacket Coal Company's pit eight miles east of Grundy, with at least 50 other persons believed to be trapped in the mine.

J. W. Thomas, assistant trainmaster for the Norfolk & Western railroad, reported he was informed of the bodies of six men were found heaped together not far inside the mine. Two others, who were working close to the outside, were killed as the blast overturned an eight-ton mine motor and decapitated them.

Twenty rescue teams in action at midnight under the direction of E. F. Smith, Red Jacket Coal Company superintendent, had pierced 1,000 feet into the wrecked mine.
Officials said it would probably be necessary to go three-quarters of a mile underground before reaching all of the trapped men.

Wives, Mothers, Children.
Crowds of women and children rushed to the mountainside, to form the pathetic watch which every mine explosion brings.

Wives, mothers and children made up a considerable part of the crowd, which stood around apathetically, talking in lowered voices as do bystanders at the scenes of such catastrophes.

The blast occurred shortly after the night shift had been wheeled into the pit in mine cars at 3:30 p. m. (Atlanta time). Flames spurred 200 feet from the mouth, overturning a motor which fell on the motorman, John Blevins, decapitating him.

Ed Harris, standing outside at the time, said:

"You couldn't describe it. One minute we were there busy and the next everything was in a mess.
It's hard to think just what happened."

Approximately 300 men worked at the mine.

While thousands jammed their way toward the scene over the narrow, winding roads, the United States Department of Mines and Mine Bureau of Virginia and West Virginia quickly mobilized rescue workers.

Rocks Store Mile Away.

So terrific was the blast that merchandise was knocked from the shelves of the Oakwood Smokeless Coal Company's store
a mile and a quarter away.

A house near the mouth of the mine was blown to bits and three eight-ton electric motors used for hauling coal cars were blown from

MILK PRODUCERS OPEN COURT FIGHT ON CONTROL ACT

Confederation Files Action at Columbus To Void 1937 Law; Discrimination Charged in Suit.

COLUMBUS, Ga., April 22.—(AP)—
A bill in equity was filed in Muscogee superior here today by the Georgia Milk Producers' Confederation, a DeKalb corporation, declaring that house bill No. 310, commonly known as the Georgia milk control act of 1937, is unconstitutional and asking that Glenn Holcombe, Mrs. J. Sy Conn,
George A. Sancken, J. Schley
Thompson, Columbus Roberts Sr.,
Charles G. Duncan, and T. Grady Head, defendants in the action, be joined specifically from enforcing the act in so far as it applies to the Atlanta district.

Plaintiffs attacked the act as unconstitutional and allege that it violates the due process of law under the Georgia constitution, as well as the equal protection of the laws clause of the constitution of Georgia. They charge that no emergency existed at the time of the passage of the act, as set forth by the legislature and is unconstitutional on this ground, as well as violating the constitution provisions which do not permit price fixing. They charge further that the act is discriminatory in that provision is made therein whereby owners of less than six cows are excused from complying with its regulations.

A temporary restraining order was issued by Judge C. F. Mc-Laughlin, enjoining the defendants from collecting or attempting to collect license fees claimed to be due by the plaintiffs, and a rule nisi was issued setting May 31 as the date of hearing on the question of granting an interlocutory injunction.

Vinson Will Tour Nation's Defense Line

CHARLESTON, S. C., April 22.
(UP)—Chairman Vinson, Democrat, Georgia, of the house military affairs committee, and Representative May, Democrat, Kentucky, of the military affairs committee, tonight announced that subcommittees of both groups will make an inspection tour this summer of the nation's defenses from Maine to Alaska.

The trip probably will start in June and May cover about 20,000 miles, most of it by air.

Atlantans Will Lose Hour's Sleep Tonight as Daylight Saving Begins

Atlantans will lose an hour's sleep tonight in order to inaugurate the annual daylight saving period which will give them an extra 60 minutes of sunshine during the remainder of the summer.

Officially, all clocks will move forward one hour at exactly 12:01 o'clock Sunday morning. And they won't be moved back until the last of September.

Churches, schools, government offices and business concerns generally will observe the stepped-up schedule, which actually corresponds to eastern standard time, but railroads will continue to operate just as if there had been no change.

A few complications already have appeared. Post office officials pointed out yesterday that trains which now arrive between 6 and 6:30 a. m. will be getting in between 7 and 7:30 a. m. starting tomorrow. This means that much

RIVERS TO REVEAL PLANS FOR FUTURE IN SPEECH TONIGHT

Governor Will Deliver
Address Before Special Meeting of Democratic Executive Committee.

ROY HARRIS IN CITY
FOR CONFERENCE

Program of Biennial Primary for September 14
Will Be Outlined Here.

Governor Rivers yesterday completed preparations for his address tonight before the Democratic state executive committee in which he expected to reveal his plans for the future which include either a campaign for re-election or a race for the United States senate.

The Rivers speech will be a highlight of the special meeting of the committee, called by Chairman Charles S. Reel, to map plans for the biennial state-wide primary fixed by law for September 14. The session will be held at the Ansley hotel.

Returns to Atlanta.

The Governor returned to Atlanta late yesterday from a trip to South Georgia, a part of which was spent at Point Peter, where he drafted the speech he is to deliver tonight. The address will be broadcast to the state over Station WSB beginning at 9 o'clock.

The chief executive declined to comment on the Thursday night speech of Hugh Howell, Atlanta attorney and former state committee chairman, who has announced his candidacy for the governor-ship.

"I would rather not comment on the political situation until my speech tomorrow night," Rivers said.

Harris Silent.

Speaker Roy W. Harris, of the house of representatives, considered Rivers' No. 1 lieutenant, arrived from his home in Augusta last night and was in conference with the Governor. Like the Governor, however, he had "nothing to say."

"At present I am a candidate for re-election to the house of representatives," Harris said. "If re-elected, of course, I will offer for speaker again."

A number of other Rivers leaders arrived last night from over the state and still others are expected early today. However, inasmuch as the Governor's speech already is written it was not believed that pre-session conferences today would change the chief executive's plans.

Included among the early arrivals was I. S. Peebles, also of Augusta, newly-chosen chairman of the rules committee of the state committee. The Peebles group will meet this afternoon to lay out a program for tonight's meeting.

Peebles said he expected to con-

Defense Attorneys, Client and Prosecutor Awaiting Burns' Verdict

Defendant, defense attorneys and the state's attorney as they awaited the verdict of guilty rendered by the jury yesterday in the trial of Pee Wee Burns on 37 counts of bribery. Left to right, they are W. R.
Bentley, George Finch, attorneys for Burns; Burns, third from the left,
poned sentencing Burns until 10 o'clock this morning.

Pay Bill Reported to House Is Held Step Nearer Defeat

Measure Runs Into Rebellious Congress and Unfriendly Rules Committee; Congressman Ramspeck Files
Bristling Dissent on Measure.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—(AP)—
The house labor committee tonight started its new "escalator" wage-hour bill down the last mile toward probable defeat with a plea for enactment to halt "vicious spiral of deflation" and salary cutting during the present depression.

In a formal report belaboring
"chiseling" employers and warning that federal and state relief outlays will not continue indefinitely, the labor committee laid the explosive measure before a recalcitrant rules committee which holds the power of life and death over it. If it hurdles that barrier it will run against a rebellious congress.

Representative Ramspeck, a member of the labor committee, filed a bristling dissenting report, branding the bill as "unconstitutional" because it attempts to set standards "arbitrarily" and discriminates against the south.

"When the bill reaches the rules committee, I intend to talk a little law to the members—about two hours of it," Ramspeck said. His own wage-hour bill was thrown overboard by the committee.

The rules group, controlled by a little band of insurgent southern Democrats and Republicans, bottled up a measure similar to the present one for many months last year. It was blasted loose only by a petition of 218 house members and later recommitted on the floor to the labor committee for revision.

House leaders admit privately that there is no indication that the four necessary votes have switched to the rules committee to send it to the floor, despite intimations that Representative Martin, Republican, Massachusetts, a member of the labor committee, would switch.

CONFEREES AGREE ON PROFITS LEVY MAYOR APPROVES 62 LIQUOR STORES

Under Plan Tax Would Range From 16 1-2 to 19
Per Cent on Incomes.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—(AP)—
A joint senate-house conference committee agreed today on a modified version of the undistributed profits tax.

Under the agreement, the tax would range from 16 1-2 to 19 per cent on corporation income instead of 16 to 20 per cent, as provided originally in the house bill.

The compromise provides that the capital gains levy, on which an agreement also was reached, and the undistributed tax would be effective for only two years—
the calendar years 1938 and 1939.
New legislation would be required to continue them beyond that time.

Under the compromise corporations with more than $25,000 net income will pay the 16 1-2 to 19 per cent taxes on their income, depending upon the amount of profits they distribute to shareholders.

The original house formula allowed corporations a deduction of one-fourth of one per cent in their tax rate for each ten per cent of income distributed. Chairman Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi, of the senate finance committee, said this formula would be adapted to the new rates of 16 1-2 to 19 per cent.

As provided in the house bill, the undistributed profits levy will apply only on corporations having more than $25,000 net income.

Corporations with income below that figure will pay a graduated scale of flat income taxes as provided originally by the house.

ACCUSED OF LYING

Prosecutor Retorts That Defense Is Attempting To Intimidate the Pair.

A. T. Jeans, known generally as Pee Wee Burns, was found guilty yesterday by a Fulton superior court jury on 37 counts of bribery of two city policemen and six Fulton deputy sheriffs no longer in the county service in his illegal liquor operations.

The jury deliberated an hour and 15 minutes, after taking time out for lunch and returning to hear a 50-minute charge by Judge Paul S. Etheridge.

Judge Etheridge announced he would sentence Burns at 10 o'clock this morning.

The jury's verdict, brought in at 4:10 o'clock yesterday afternoon, concluded the first inning in the Fulton county grand jury's war against graft and corruption, Assistant Solicitor General E. E.
Andrews, who prosecuted the case for the state, said.

Takes Verdict Calmly.

Under the verdict, Burns can be sentenced on each of the bribery counts. Bribery, a misdemeanor, is punishable by the maximum penalty of $1,000 fine, 12 months in a county prison camp and six months in jail.

Burns took the verdict calmly, flanked before the judge's bench
by his two attorneys, George Finch and W. R. Bentley.

Judge Etheridge announced first he would sentence Burns at 9:30 o'clock this morning.

"Your honor, the defense would appreciate it if you would make that 10 o'clock," Finch protested.
"I don't like to get up before breakfast."

Judge Etheridge granted the request.

The courtroom, packed throughout the trial, was quickly cleared after the verdict was handed to Andrews by Jury Foreman W. C.
V. McDonald, of Route 5, Collins district, Bolton.

Finch said he had nothing to say, while Burns stood by leaning on a window sill and staring at the roofs of buildings below.

LA FOLLETTE CALLS LIBERALS TO MEET; THIRD PARTY HINTED

Invites 3,000 to 4,000 to Wisconsin Conference Next Thursday.

MADISON, April 22.—(AP)—Governor Philip F. La Follette tonight issued a call for a meeting of liberals in Madison next Thursday night which may be the forerunner of a national third party.

The Governor announced the meeting in the last of four radio speeches in which he called for organized public action to rout the depression, and for the third time rapped the trend of the Roosevelt administration's recovery policies.

La Follette said he had invited between 3,000 and 4,000 persons with whom he had talked in the last three months.

At a press conference, the Governor said he expected the attendance would be mainly from the midwest, but there might be others from eastern states, including New York. He refused to give names.

The Governor was noncommittal on whether he would seek a fourth term or run for the United States senate. Possibility of a third party in 1940 led observers to speculate whether he might retire from office and devote his time to new party organization work.

La Follette praised the "brilliant leadership" of the Roosevelt administration for showing the necessity for organized teamwork, but said:

"Instead of organized action to produce more, the main line has been organized action to produce less—on the one hand a policy of restricting production on the farm and in the factory, and on the other hand keeping millions of people out of production through relief, doles and make-work."

"Why don't the railroads modernize themselves? Because they are plastered from cellar to garret with mortgages—with bonds representing values that have largely disappeared. A government that saw the problem and had the courage to act could cut through the red tape in a few months."

LAGUARDIA CELEBRATES WITH OKLAHOMA COWBOYS
GUTHRIE, Okla., April 22.—(AP)—New York's Mayor LaGuardia, in cowboy boots and hat, celebrated in pioneer fashion with nearly 100,000 Oklahomans here today and predicted a new and potent political alignment of farmers and laborers in the 1940 presidential campaign.

The farmers of the midwest, LaGuardia said, would furnish the backbone of a new liberal political movement. He said small businessmen would join in the alignment which would transcend party lines.

Movie Colony Has Its Troubles --- And They're Financial

Burglar Loots Home of Carole Lombard of $25,000 in Jewels.

HOLLYWOOD, April 22.—(UP)—West Los Angeles police announced tonight two burglars had looted the home of Carole Lombard, blond screen comedienne, and of Harry Curland, a caterer, of $43,000 in jewels and furs.

The homes are in Beverly Hills. Miss Lombard reported a loss of $25,000, exclusively in jewels.

Gems and furs valued at $18,000 were taken from the home of Curland, who operates the concessions at Santa Anita race track and Los Angeles memorial coliseum.

Officers said the intruders walked into Miss Lombard's home while she and her secretary, Madeline Fields, were absent, and ransacked the bedrooms. The servants, who were in the home at the time, were unaware of the robbery. The loss was discovered early today when the actress found her jewel case empty.

Miss Lombard said approximately $21,500 of the gems were hers, while the other $3,500 worth belonged to Miss Fields. The burglars ignored several valuable fur pieces.

Curland said articles missing from his home were a diamond and ruby bracelet, $6,000; a sapphire bracelet, $4,000; a diamond brooch, $2,500; a mink coat, $4,000, and a fox fur cape, $1,500.

fer with Chairman Reid this morning to get his views on various matters to be brought before the committee.

In the September 14 primary a Governor, United States senator, two justices of the supreme court, state house officers and 10 congressmen as well as a number of the superior judges and solicitors general are to be chosen.

George Seeks Re-election.
Senator George is up for re-election and is a certain candidate to succeed himself. All congressmen are expected to offer for new terms, as are state house officers.

Hutchinson, of the state supreme court, has announced his intention to retire from office. Three well-known lawyers have announced for his post.

Thus far only State Treasurer George B. Hamilton has announced opposition, Zack D. Cravey, of McRae, having launched a campaign for Hamilton's post several weeks ago.

The committee, after fixing rules, entries fees and other details of the primary, will open offices in Atlanta at which candidates may pay their fees and file for the offices they seek.

Actress Simon Charges Account At Bank Is Short

HOLLYWOOD, April 22.—(UP)—The district attorney's office announced tonight it was investigating a complaint of Simone Simon, tempestuous young French screen actress, that she had discovered a shortage of between $15,000 and $50,000 in her bank account.

Captain Klein, head of the district attorney's bureau of investigation, said he expected to "clear up the case" early next week.

He said the actress was suspicious of a woman whom she believed had forged her power of attorney while she was in Europe and had drawn heavily against her bank account.

Miss Simon telephoned Klein several days ago to report the alleged shortage. She did not know the exact amount of the "shrinkage" but said it ranged roughly between $15,000 and $50,000.

Klein refused to disclose whether he was planning any arrests or whether the person Miss Simon suspected had been questioned.

"We are in the middle of an investigation now," he said.

He said the actress returned from Europe last June and that part of the asserted shortage had occurred since then.

SLAYING OF MOTHER DESCRIBED BY BOY

Youth on Trial for Killing Crippled Parent With 9-Inch Knife.

CHICAGO, April 22.—(AP)—Sixteen-year-old Teddy Daniels today told how he slew his crippled mother with a bread knife, but he confessed with trembling lips he did not know why he drove the nine-inch blade into her throat.

Pale and nervous, he related his story from the witness stand in a courtroom teeming with spectators.

Chief Justice Harrington of the criminal court, who alone must decide the boy's fate since the defense waived a jury, posed a point-blank question:

"Tell me, Teddy, why did you stab your mother?"

"I can't give any reason," young Daniels said. "I loved her."

"Suppose you were in the same position again. Could you control your impulse?"

"I don't know."

Attorney Reid asked how he felt about the crime now.

"I try to forget it during the day," was the response. "During the night I cry. I pray. I ask God to forgive me."

Nazis Beat and Paint Crippled N. Y. Editor

NEW YORK, April 22.—(UP)—Four alleged Nazis invaded a magazine office tonight and after forcing the crippled editor to kiss a Nazi emblem, beat and stripped him and then painted black swastikas on his body.

The attack occurred in the office of an anti-Communist, anti-Fascist and anti-Nazi League, located in a building in one of the busiest sections of Brooklyn.

Charles Weiss, 31, editor of the magazine, "Uncle Sam," published by the league, was the victim of the attack. His assailants wrecked the office and tore down a large American flag from a wall.

220 Ousted by France
PARIS (Saturday), April 23.—(UP)—Four "white" Russian generals and a former Soviet were among 220 persons ordered today to leave France in the first phase of a campaign to rid the country of "undesirable foreigners" before the state visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, of Great Britain, June 28.

BRANNEN ELECTED EDITOR OF WHEEL

Receives the Largest Vote Ever Given to Student at Emory.

Polling the largest number of votes ever recorded, a student election at Emory University, Ed Brannen, of Millen, Ga., was named editor of the Wheel, campus weekly, for next year, yesterday.

Brannen defeated Claude Nelson, of Decatur, taking 661 votes to his opponent's 146.

Two Atlantans were chosen to head Emory's other publications. J. Byrd, son of Mrs. Daniel M. Byrd, 837 Clifton road, was elected editor of the Phoenix, quarterly magazine. John Gifford, son of Mrs. G. W. Gifford, 2083 Ridgewood drive, was named editor of the Campus, yearbook.

Byrd won over Bradford Ansley, Tampa, Fla., with a vote of 453 to 342. Gifford defeated Loren Dickerson, of Moultrie, by a count of 484 to 313.

From a field of 14 candidates, six students, including three Atlantans, were elected to represent the College of Arts and Sciences in the student activities council.

Those from Atlanta are James Mackay, son of Rev. and Mrs. Edward G. Mackay, 1167 Oakdale road; Lew Gordon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis F. Gordon, 29 Walker terrace, and Linwood Beck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anderson M. Beck, 1591 Evans drive.

The other three representatives from the college are Ed Brannen, Millen; James Humber, Clarkdale, Miss.; and Ray Miller, Bantown.

William E. Pierce, of Chamblee, defeated Smith Johnston, of Woodstock, by three votes for the office representing the School of Business Administration in the council, recording 35 to Johnston's 32. Jay Cumbaa, of Columbus, was the third candidate.

Ed Tucker, of Lithonia, will serve as president of the senior class in the college next year, having defeated Henry Michael, son of H. L. Michael, 328 Ponce de Leon avenue, his closest opponent, by four votes. He polled 55 to Michael's 51.

Election of senior class president in the School of Business Administration was delayed until poll lists could be corrected. A run-over will be held next Friday, April 29.

Next Friday will also see a run-over for the office of president of the student body. Marcus Bartlett, son of Mrs. Eula Bartlett, 305 Fourth street, obtained a plurality but a majority is necessary for election.

He will oppose Craig Robertson, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Robertson, 149 Lawrence avenue. Bartlett polled 321 votes to Robertson's 310.

Total number of votes polled was the largest Emory elections have ever seen.

ber, may support the new measure. The cumbersome petition route is "definitely out," they said.

Bullitt, committee chairman, O'Connor, Democrat, New York, an "in and out" New Dealer, has been "turning the heat" on his colleagues, however, during the past week and plans to call a meeting next week to discuss the situation.

Southerners Inflamed.
Irate southerners, more inflamed over the new bill than the old because it does not include differentials favoring their section, plan to use filibuster tactics to delay consideration if it reaches the floor. They claim they can hold out until adjournment, scheduled for May 14 or May 20.

Labor Committee Chairman Norton, Democrat, New Jersey, who signed the formal report, banks heavily on winning Republican support from the industrial east which is more favorably disposed to the bill because the south is not granted differentials.

The bill, which would establish a 40-cent-per-hour "floor" for wages and a 40-hour week "ceiling" on hours after three years, carries the blessing of President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, and Chairman John L. Lewis, of the Committee for Industrial Organization. It starts at 25 cents per hour and a 44-hour work week. It would be enforced by the Justice Department.

Wage Cuts Deplored.
"With the decline have come the inevitable wage cuts which the great mass of American businessmen so deplore, but are powerless to prevent," the report said. "These men know that wage-cutting sets in motion a vicious spiral of deflation, which, if allowed to gather sufficient strength may threaten the foundations of government itself."

Maude Adams Talks Contract For Movie Role

HOLLYWOOD, April 22.—(UP)—Maude Adams, the famous stage actress of another day, arrived in Hollywood today to discuss the possibility of entering motion pictures.

She went into conference with David O. Selznick, president of Selznick International Pictures, relative to an appearance in "The Young in Heart."

Studio spokesmen emphasized that no contract has been signed as yet and that any agreement would cover but the one picture.

The role in which the stage's famous "Peter Pan" would be cast would be that of an elderly millionaire.

Miss Adams, once one of the world's most renowned stars, went into retirement in 1918. Since then she made one brief tour. Last fall she accepted an offer to teach dramatics at Stephens College, a girls' school in Columbia, Mo.

'IDEAL IN ASH CAN' PICTURED TO D.A.R.

Editor of "Nation's Business" Declares Republic's Substance Changed.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—(AP)—Merle Thorpe, editor of "Nation's Business," told the Daughters of the American Revolution tonight that if their forefathers returned to America today, they would find the form of the republic they established, but not its substance.

"They would find successful enterprise challenged as greedy, non-social and unpatriotic, and penalties of even known variety imposed upon the enterprisers and stimulators of business activity," he said in a speech prepared for the D. A. R. congress.

Thorpe said those founding fathers would find a new kind of law-making—hundreds of thousands of officers in 150-odd bureaus, commissions, boards and authorities, passing regulations on a mass production basis.

"And they would see another ideal in the ash can," he continued, "the people's savings taken and expended—not invested—in a political program."

Dr. Jesse Randolph Killems, Los Angeles, Cal., minister, praised the Daughters of the American Revolution tonight for the enemies they have made.

wage-hour bill was an unconstitutional economic absurdity and charged it was deliberately intended to damage southern industrial development.

Hall, also president of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railway, declared important legislative functions and other powers were given to the secretary of labor by the bill, "vesting that public official with too much power."

"The Industrial Council is official voice of southern industry. Hall attacked the bill as an economic absurdity because "no differential in wages is provided for no matter how different conditions may be," and said the bill apparently permits no review on the vital actions the labor secretary may take."

Declaring the bill was not designed to help those who need help most—the agricultural worker and the retail store employee—Hall said no attempt was made to regulate the wages of agricultural workers "because that involves politics." He said they received the lowest pay for the longest hours than any other worker.

"On studying the hourly wages paid in different sections of the country," Hall said, "it seems obvious, generally speaking, that almost the entire burden of the law will fall on the southern states. Although the facts now show that, considering all factors, manufacturing concerns in the south are being relatively more generous to their employees than manufacturers in any other section of the country."

"Whether the deliberate intent of this bill is seriously to damage industrial development in the south, the fact remains that, if enacted into law and held valid, it would be an almost death blow to industry in the south."

CAFE CAVE-IN TOLL MOUNTS TO 22 DEAD

Phenix City Hospitals Report 83 Persons Are Receiving Treatment.

PHENIX CITY, Ala., April 22.—(AP)—Deaths from the collapse of a two-story cafe building mounted today to 22, all negroes, and Police Chief Gay said he believed rescue workers had removed all bodies from the wreckage.

Hospitals reported 83 persons receiving treatment for injuries. Three white persons were identified by hospital attendants as Luther Jones, about 55, who occupied a room on the second floor of the building; Mrs. Bernice Dunnivant, 25, and Mrs. Villa Mae Dunnivant, 25, both of Phenix City. X-ray pictures were being studied, officials said, in an effort to determine the extent of their injuries.

Gay said he understood Building Inspector Leonard Ray was organizing an investigation and that preliminary inquiries "already have begun."

MAYOR APPROVES 62 LIQUOR STORES

had requested the "number one" license several weeks ago and State Revenue Commissioner T. Grady Head declared he will approve the first state license for the hotel this morning.

He will sign several retail licenses today, it was said, but a number of local dealers will not obtain state licenses until Monday.

No liquor store will open in the city for legal sales today, Head said.

To Stock Stores.
Wholesalers will be ready Monday to stock retail stores at short notice, they asserted.

Even though Mayor Hartford delayed signing the retail permits until the last minute yesterday in an attempt to give the local wholesalers time to sell stocks to Atlanta retailers, it developed that many dealers here have purchased whiskey from out-of-town wholesalers.

The mayor had said he would seek to prevent this, but City Clerk Joe Richardson declared yesterday there is no way a license fee can be collected from an out-of-town wholesaler if his goods are shipped directly to the retailer without being stored here.

A number of Atlanta retailers will not be able to open for business the first thing Monday morning, because of the necessary delay in obtaining licenses and stocks of liquors but all expect to get under way with sales before the end of the day.

11 O'clock Closing.
The package stores can remain open until 11 o'clock at night, opening at 8 o'clock in the morning. They will be closed Sundays and election days.

Retail stores will be located in the downtown business district with few exceptions. Three stores will be located at Tenth and Peachtree streets. The Biltmore hotel has a permit on West Peachtree street.

As Atlantans prepared to buy their legal liquor here next week, many were stocking up for the week end in near-by Smyrna and Marietta. Two stores opened Thursday afternoon in Smyrna,

MUSICIAN ARRESTED IN LEVINE BOY PLOT

CHICAGO, April 22.—(AP)—Government agents cracked down today on another plotter who sought to capitalize on the mysterious disappearance of 12-year-old Peter Levine.

Shortly after he had walked into a trap, Charles Edmund Lavender, 36, a wandering musician, was charged with attempting to extort $30,000 from Murray Levine, father of the lad who has been missing from his New Rochelle, N. Y., home since February 24.

The prisoner pleaded guilty before United States Commissioner Walker to sending an extortion letter through the mails and was held to the grand jury under $10,000 bond.

False Alarm Prank Causes Injury to 30

NEW YORK, April 22.—(AP)—A prankster turned in a false fire alarm in crowded Brooklyn today. Results:

A hook and ladder truck collided with a trolley car, injuring 25 passengers and five firemen. The car was derailed and the truck turned in two.

Fireman Stanley Gukowski, 28, whose 6-year-old daughter, Mary, is suffering from pneumonia, lost his right foot and is expected to die.

Ten others are in serious condition. Three official investigations were launched.

JAPANESE FORCES CENTER STRATEGY ON RAILWAY LINE

Reorganized Troops Expected To Try to Break Chinese Defenses.

SHANGHAI, April 23.—(Saturday)—(AP)—Heavy Japanese reinforcements were rushed down the Tientsin-Pukow railway today in the second stage of the new Shantung offensive already launched at Lini, 70 miles to the east.

The fresh troops, accompanied by tanks and artillery, arrived at Tenghsien, 60 miles north of Su-chow, and started working their way southward and eastward to join exhausted forces around Lin-cheng and Tsaochwang.

The Japanese strategy apparently is to make a drive down the railway while their reorganized forces, strung out along a 30-mile front south and southwest of Lini, attempt to break the strong Chinese defenses in that sector.

It was estimated that 200,000 of the half-million Chinese troops in Shantung province were entrenched in the hills on the Lini front, making the fight there a contest of manpower and machine guns against field artillery and airplanes.

The Japanese now are proceeding cautiously along the unwieldy front to avoid a repetition of hampered communications which led to their recent reverses in southern Shantung.

In one counter-attack, led by crack Kwangsi troops, the Chinese reported they had driven the Japanese back to a point near the southern outskirts of Lini.

Severe fighting continued around Yihhsien, where Chinese reported earlier that Japanese forces in the besieged city had broken through Chinese lines and joined the main Japanese column on the Lini front, 40 miles to the north-east.

The reports did not make it clear whether all the 5,000 Japanese in Yihhsien had escaped.

Heavy fighting also was reported around Tsaochwang and Hanchwang, where Japanese positions were said to be improved.

RECREATION TREND HELD FALLACIOUS

Leisure Has Become Time to Do Nothing, Physical Educator Declares.

Commercial recreation "has jumped the gun" in the United States with the result that leisure is a time for doing nothing, the American Association for Health and Physical Education was told yesterday.

Dr. Jay B. Nash, chairman of New York University's department of health and physical education, advocated returning recreation to a private, individual status.

He said the unemployed have much time on their hands but their worries will not permit them to enjoy it in recreational pursuits.

Final sessions of the four-day convention will be held today.

Tom McDonough, of Eastern Kentucky State Teachers' College, at Richmond, Ky., was named president of the southern district of the association yesterday. Anne Schley Duggan, of the Texas College for Women, at Denton, Texas, became president-elect.

Other officers elected were A. W. Holt, of the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, vice president; Jackson Sharnan, of the University of Alabama, secretary, and Jesse Haire, of Baton Rouge, treasurer. Leonora Ivey, of Valdosta, and Joe Hall, of Tallahassee, were named members-at-large of the board.

BARTLETT'S RITES ARE HELD IN MACON

Judicial and Shrine Representatives Present.

MACON, Ga., April 22.—(AP)—Rites for Judge Charles L. Bartlett, 85, prominent for three decades in state and national public life, were held this afternoon in Christ Episcopal church here. The Rev. Matthew M. Warren, rector, conducted the service, and burial was in Rose Hill cemetery.

Judge Bartlett died at his home here yesterday after a long illness.

Many friends high in the affairs of state, including Chief Justice Richard B. Russell Sr., and other members of the supreme court bench, and judges of other courts in middle Georgia, were listed as honorary pallbearers. Al Sihah Temple of the Shrine, of which Judge Bartlett had been potentate, sent an escort of the present and past potentates.

'JUNK' IN HOUSE? FILL GOODWILL BAG

Renovation of Goods Will Give Employment.

Housewives were called upon yesterday by the Atlanta Goodwill Industries to help the unemployed by filling a "goodwill bag" with discarded household goods.

It is estimated each bag filled will provide work for 10 persons in sorting, renovating and repairing its contents for use again in many serviceable ways. The bags may be filled with any unwanted article, such as books, magazines, furniture and clothing.

Such work, it was pointed out, gives self-respecting employment and wages. During 1937, Goodwill Industries paid out to individuals in wages, including relief, $6,259.67. This amount was made possible largely through the giving of "goodwill bags" to that institution.

AMBITION WILL NOT DOWN

While from the viewpoint of the completely unemployed it is undoubtedly unfair to find workers who are doing two jobs—one of them under the WPA—and drawing pay for both, the situation affords welcome evidence that the spirit of American ambition and determination is not dead among the recipients of work relief.

The man who, not satisfied with a mere subsistence wage from WPA, goes out and secures private employment for his spare time displays an initiative and a will to get ahead that can only be regarded as commendable. Such men are the sort who later win to success by the only certain road, the road of hard work and personal effort.

It is, however, unfortunate that, by the determination of some individuals, others should be left entirely without support, prevented from securing jobs through the very agency set up by the government, and supported by the money of the taxpayers, to provide at least a living income for the otherwise absolutely destitute. The WPA, after all, is supposed to provide for the jobless, not for men who are still able to earn wages from private employers.

The special senate committee, headed by Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, reports that of 7,982 skilled workers on WPA, interviewed in five cities, of which Atlanta is one, 5,049, or 63 per cent, admitted they had other employment.

The policy of the WPA, that of supplying part-time work only, makes it easy for men and women to secure remunerative employment for the balance of their time. That is, as easy as for the average seeker after a job, today.

Skilled workers are, naturally, more apt to find these additional jobs than unskilled, for the simple reason that the market for the trained worker is always greater than for the untrained. Thus, if all classes of WPA workers could be checked, it is probable the percentage of those with dual employment would be far less than the figure given.

While it is, as said, individually commendable for a man to strive his utmost, by hard work in one or two more jobs, to provide for his dependents and to advance in the economic scale, it should not be through the channel of the WPA, thus depriving another man of any job at all.

The Byrnes committee, in its report, pointed out that, admittedly, the WPA does not provide a job for every unemployed person in the nation. "This being true," the report continues, "one worker should not be paid the security wage, receive outside employment and additional income, and continue indefinitely at work on projects, while others certified as eligible are denied the opportunity to receive any employment."

"The administrator should endeavor to spread employment among all eligible workers, and in the rotation of eligible workers should take into consideration the income from outside employment."

FORESTS AS CROPS

With the woodpulp industry fast developing in the south, landowners are called upon to inaugurate extensive programs of reforestation to insure a future supply of timber for the mills that promise to dot this section of the country.

In an address before the Georgia Forestry Association in Valdosta this week, Harry L. Brown, assistant secretary of agriculture, appealed for a planned basis of sustained yield to meet the future demands of forest industries, and warned against indiscriminate cutting of present stands. He deplored the old practice of forest exploitation which has resulted in denuded areas, unemployment and lost markets.

It is evident that intelligent planning must begin now if the new industry is to succeed. Southerners should remember the disastrous situation caused by the denuding processes of the sawmill and crosstie industries several years ago and start immediately to avoid a recurrence of this condition. It will be too late after the forests have been stripped of their valuable timber.

Assistant Secretary Brown offers a worthwhile suggestion for extending the practice of timber-farming. Explaining that farmers seem destined to follow a course of curtailed cotton and tobacco production, he recommends that the acres thus retired, as well as all available depleted timber areas, be planted in forests. Such a course seems wise not only for Georgia and the south as a whole, but for the farmer individually.

The agricultural official regards forests, as crops, and rightly so. As he says, the basic processes involved are the same as those applied in modern agriculture. Not until the landowner recognizes this fundamental principle can the south enjoy the blessing it can receive from the growth of the woodpulp and paper industry.

WAGE RATES AND INCOME

That increases in the rate of pay do not always result in increased income is strikingly demonstrated in the figures for southern industrial wages during February, compiled by the Southern States Industrial Council.

Wage rates in the south averaged, for that month, 11.6 per cent greater than for the same month one year ago. Yet there was an average reduction of 16.1 per cent in the hours worked per week, resulting in a net reduction of 6.4 per cent in the average pay envelope per week.

To analyze this situation in full would require a more comprehensive understanding of the causes that have produced the present business depression than has yet been displayed by any authority.

It is, however, self-evident that increased wage rates, adding to the cost of production, do not necessarily mean greater income—and, thereby, greater spending power—for the workers themselves. When costs advance, consumption of any product necessarily decreases. Which means less demand and reduced operating time for the factories producing that product.

Thus the workers who have been rejoicing at a greater scale of pay, find that, in the long run, they have a smaller amount of money each week.

There is, in relation to wages and income, a law of diminishing returns, just as in all other economic problems. Workers paid at the rate of $10 per hour, who only find one hour's work per week, are worse off than those who get 50 cents an hour but work 30 hours per week.

The happy medium, of course, is the highest scale of pay permitted under full-time operation conditions. When pay costs rise to the point where consumption—and work—shrinks, the wage earner is the sufferer.

Everyone interested in the prosperity of the south wants to see the highest possible scales of pay commensurate with sound business economics. But to unbalance the industrial and business structure just for the sake of a high hourly wage, irrespective of weekly earnings, is to invite depression, business disaster and unemployment.

THE NEW INTANGIBLES TAX

Reports from the State Revenue Department indicate that the legislature, in enacting the new tax upon intangible properties, acted even more wisely than it knew. The yield from the new levy is expected, in this its first year, to exceed the $2,000,000 estimate made by its proponents.

But it is not from the financial side only that the new tax is valuable to the state. It has other values which are, nevertheless, of prime importance.

For years, under the old valorem system, owners of intangibles, stocks, bonds, money in banks and other assets, admittedly left them off their tax returns. The rate of taxation was so high payment on a par value assessment amounted to practical confiscation. Hence it was generally expected that the law would be voided in every possible case.

Now, with these properties taxed at a fair rate, it is stated that 160,000 returns have already been filed. Removal of the need for technical dishonesty from 160,000 citizens is worth much to the state.

Secondly the reasonable rate of taxation now imposed ends the necessity for the removal of much of this capital property from the state. Owners of such investments are returning their wealth to Georgia, where it may be used to provide capital for the development of the state in innumerable lines.

From whatever angle it is regarded—either from the tangible value of more than $2,000,000 in new revenue for the state, or from its more theoretical advantages—the new intangibles tax is proving itself one of the wisest pieces of legislation ever enacted in Georgia.

The mayor of Hell, in Norway, has been a much-interviewed caller in our midst. Everyone is eager to know when business will return from there.

Thought dead, a western woman sat up in a hospital, but not in time. Her grandson was already off to the ball game.

"Anyone could have done it," is a good sportsman's way of saying he doesn't think so.

Editorial of the Day

COTTON AND CARTELS

(From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.)
In the society of commodities, cotton today is casting many an envious glance in the direction of rubber. Both suffer from that dread disease of commodities, overproduction, or, as it is sometimes called, underconsumption, but rubber is equipped with a better mechanism to bounce back into a healthy price condition.

For rubber has behind it a cartel, known as the international rubber regulation committee. This cartel, controlling 98 per cent of the world's rubber production, has the power to regulate rubber planting and also to fix quarterly quotas on the amount that shall be placed on the market. Last spring, rubber was selling at the boom-time price of 25 cents a pound, but with the collapse of the commodity market in London, the quotation dived to 10 cents. So the cartel committee met in London two weeks ago, reduced the quarterly market quota to 60 per cent and sat back to await a rise in the price. The price is up to 12 cents now and is due to go higher.

Such is the power of a cartel. Poor cotton can boast of no international production or marketing controls. The best it can do is an acreage control scheme applying in the United States alone, which functions as an invitation for the cotton-producing areas of the rest of the world to increase their acreage and appropriate more of America's share of the world cotton market. Despite production control in the United States for the past five years, the world carryover of cotton this spring is estimated at 22,000,000 bales, more than 4,000,000 bales higher than the previous largest carryover on record, in 1932.

For fairly obvious reasons, cotton production does not lend itself to control by an international cartel. So all cotton can do is to pine away in self-pity and cast jealous glances at rubber. Cotton can only look on and sigh vainly for a world in which the free law of supply and demand determines all other prices, as, in the long run, it must for cotton.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

ROOSEVELT TAX UKASE WASHINGTON, April 22.—In dealing with his congressional leaders, the President sometimes resembles old Chapin, the evil-tempered city editor of the New York Evening World. On one occasion, Chapin sent a reporter to ask a particularly dangerous question. The reporter presented himself, was promptly beaten up and hurled out of the interviewer's office, and returned to Chapin.

"You go back," snapped Chapin when he had heard the story, "and tell that fellow he can't intimidate me."

The presidential ukase to the house conferees on the tax bill, demanding the retention of the undistributed profits and capital gains taxes of their bill, was an order of the same sort. Representative Robert L. Doughton, of North Carolina, is not called "muley" for nothing. He is tough, stubborn, and not given to mournfulness. But if there is any more uncomfortable man on Capitol Hill than the chairman of the house ways and means committee, it is one of his fellow Democratic tax bill conferees.

The fact is that house members have been hearing from their districts on the tax bill. Whatever the validity of the claim that the undistributed profits and capital gains levies are harmful to business, belief in it is widespread and religious.

FRYING PAN OR FIRE? The unpleasant choice confronting the unhappy Mr. Doughton has often been explained in these last days. He can ignore the President and give in to the senatorial enemies of the two taxes. Or he can hold out and enrage the folks back home. Or he can return for instructions to the house. But his unwillingness to return to the house for instruction has been explained. It may be traced to an informal poll conducted by the house administration leadership, which shows a clearly preponderant sentiment for the senate tax bill.

And while Mr. Doughton has pondered his horrid dilemma, a hot fire has been built under him by a group of the most expert fire-builders in American politics. Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi; Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina; and the democracy's elder statesman, Bernard M. Baruch, are the men who laid the logs and applied the torch.

Senator Harrison and Senator Byrnes participated in the preparation of Mr. Baruch's famous testimony before Senator Byrnes' committee investigating unemployment. The Baruch attack on the undistributed profits and capital gains taxes was well weighed among them, and had much effect in the senate. Then Senator Harrison cheerfully voted for the reorganization bill, which Senator Byrnes was piloting anxiously through the senate. And now Senator Byrnes has brought out, on a day when Mr. Baruch happened to be in Washington, an unemployment committee report denouncing the undistributed profits and capital gains taxes as causes of joblessness.

Too cynical an interpretation may be put on this sequence of events, although the three fire-builders are as wily a set of Democrats as you would find in a very long walk around Washington. But the fact remains that the flames are searing the seat of Mr. Doughton's pants.

MAP OF CHAOS Just to make things a little bit harder for Mr. Doughton, there is a surprising division of sentiment on what to do about the conference deadlock. In private, the President has repeatedly described the agitation against the undistributed profits and capital gains taxes as pure smoke-screen, yet even he can hardly wish for no tax revision at all. On the other hand, in view of the senate's strong stand, he can hardly hope for the passage of the house bill. Thus, compromise is his object.

The word has gone out that he will approve a compromise in which the capital gains tax will be retained, while the "principle" of the undistributed profits tax will be retained. It is on the undistributed profits tax that the public attacks have been concentrated, and thus such a compromise would have the appearance of victory. The President dearly loves the appearance of victory, as every man in the White House always has and always will.

Fantastically enough, the actual father of the undistributed profits tax, Mr. Herman Oliphant, is now trying hard to persuade the Treasury to accept an exactly opposite compromise. The Treasury's law-makers are so eager to get home for the primaries, one would be pretty safe in predicting a triumph for Harrison. As it is, anything can happen, but, whatever it is, probably will satisfy no one.

The Real Prize

Comes a fascinating human story out of Lawrence, Mass. Out of the Lawrence Evening High school, to be exact.

They give an award, known as the Fleming prize, to the outstanding graduate of that school. The winner, this year, is a native of Syria, a mother and three children. Nine years ago this woman could speak but a word or two of the English language.

Two of her three boys are attending day school. The other is too young. Their mother first took an evening grammar school course, then as an associate editor of the school paper. Then she entered the evening high school.

And now, out of 150 graduates, most of whom are young enough to be her own sons and daughters, she is selected as the outstanding member of the graduating class.

Can't you imagine the long, hard, perplexing and oftentimes discouraging work that woman did. Long hours at night, bending over school books after she had labored a day of hard duties at her home. Much discouragement, surely.

But more determination and more courage. Courage of the type that inspired the pioneers of America, courage of the type that hewed this land out of the wilderness.

While such women are to be found in America, it matters not what is their place of nativity, how great their starting handicaps. For they cannot fail to be the mothers of good citizens.

But think of the prize she won. Not the unimportant, material thing presented with due ritual on the graduation night. But the greatest prize, the satisfaction that is hers, the knowledge of a hard job well done.

That is a prize anyone may envy.

You Can't

Be Too Careful.

I heard a story the other day that was, once again, the truth that adults can't be too careful in their contacts with children. This story points a particular moral of pastors of the churches.

A little girl, eight years old, joined the church. It was, to her, the greatest event in the world. That Sunday evening when she stood before the entire congregation to be baptized. And the preacher spoke so solemnly and so wonderfully about her, she felt how important it was. She felt the church feeling that she was a highly honored member of the congregation.

All week she had the feeling that, at last, she was one of the elect. She belonged. All the other members of the church, young and old, were her brothers and sisters and she was ready to meet them on that Christian footing.

The next Sunday morning she walked, happily and cheerily, to church. And she saw the minister and went up to him and held out her hand and said, politely and properly,

"How are you this morning, Dr. Blank?"

He looked at her and puzzled for a moment. Then said:

"I'm well, thank you. But I'm sorry I can't remember your name."

Never, she said in after years, did a child feel so let down. Here she had been thinking that Dr. Blank, only a week ago, had spent most of his time rejoicing that she had become a member of his church. And now he didn't even remember her name!

For years it ruined her interest in the church. She didn't take part in any of its activities. That is, not really. She might attend Sunday school, but she felt little, insignificant and unwanted. Wasn't it a pity he hadn't bluffed through the situation, that morning when the little girl spoke to him? If he had only called her "sister," it would have been grand. Because she thoroughly believed he felt she was his sister in the church, just as she felt he was her spiritual brother. And brothers don't tell sisters they've forgotten their names, do they?

FAIR ENOUGH Another Letter From a Bald Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By WESTBROOK PUGLER.

Railroad NEW YORK, April 22.—To start from scratch. I know no more about the railroad business than any man could learn from 20 years of clattering around the country as a customer on trains. Our trains are reliable and the fancy runs in an effort to meet the competition of the planes. The getaway of a Santa Fe, Burlington or Union Pacific luxury train from Chicago, Los Angeles or San Francisco is comparable in festivity and swank to sailing of the Isle de France or the Rex in the days of prohibition, when thirsty New Yorkers swarmed through them at night and got tight against time on the hospitality of departing friends.

The fast train lies at her berth in the station, gleaming like a new tin kettle, the crew man their stations with their elbows bowed and their brass gleaming, the passengers go aboard with an air of personal importance, and parties gather in the bars and toss off quick ones in the nonchalant, toodle-oo manner of the British seeing their kinnery off for seven years in India—which is an affectionate, of course, but all right.

You don't really drink a man away on a choo-choo ride. You go down to take a peek at the new train, which is worth seeing. And the publicity has made gala events of these departures. In Los Angeles, the widest-eyed fan town in the country, where, even after all these years the populace swarms in curious gangs to gawk at moving picture actors and pluck at them for autographs, the aisles of the Super-Chief are choked with sightseers up to the last instant before the man turns the handle and whips it out of the yard.

Costly No European train compares with any of these great special efforts of the American railroads in luxury or in the corps d'esprit of the crew. The men all seem conscious of elite rating in their respective departments, and the management struts its stuff with obvious pride. Bright metal and pretty colors adorn the interiors, and the switches and buttons for lights, fans, heaters and service in one of these new drawing rooms suggest the dashboard of a great passenger plane.

All right, but for all their high-pressure publicity and passenger-snatching, the lines which run the super-trains nevertheless are constantly telling prospective customers that oh, my goodness, no, they can't possibly book reservations, except uppers, in less than three weeks, and that, to get a single room or compartment, one really should give them a little more time.

I began by saying that I knew nothing about the railroad business, but I know the passenger's problems, and the majority of passengers haven't the remotest idea what they will be doing three weeks from any given date. Passengers, particularly those who need the speed which these lines have to sell, often undertake such trips on a few hours' or one day's notice and find themselves far down on the waiting lists or offered a double or three-passenger room at a very high price as an expensive alternative to wretched and unanimously detested upper berth. They are even supposed to be a little grateful for this.

The Truth The single room, the most sensible accommodation for the single-handed passenger on the overnight or longer hauls, is seldom to be had on any line. Even on five days' notice I have been told that there were no single rooms available, and my usual experience is that they are all out of compartments, too, but by a rare break of luck are able to offer a drawing room at a rental, including a wanton waste of railroad fare, which would pay for a five-room flat for a month. This seems to be the rule rather than the usual experience on railroads from New York to Chicago.

They have their excuses and explanations. I have heard them, but always with a suspicion that the Pullman Company or the railroad was putting the squeeze on the customer. Five days or a week is enough notice to reserve a room on a train in France or Italy, where the railroads, being state operations, are notoriously indifferent to the customers' problems. On five days' notice a suite or a company will provide a suite or a single room to Europe or around the world.

The berth in the open car is an indecent abomination held over from the primitive days of railroad travel in this country and should have been abolished years ago. Outraged to extort extra money from passengers who would rather give up than spend another night on a shelf behind those stifling green curtains.

Talmudic Tales

By DAVID MORANTZ.

PEARLS OF WISDOM.

"Many have fallen by the sword," says the Talmud, "but many more have fallen by the tongue."

"Much have I learned from my teachers," said Rabbi Chananya, "more have I learned from my fellow students, but most have I learned from my pupils."

"Prepare thyself with an education, for one does not acquire it by inheritance."

"What is wisdom? He who is willing to receive instruction from all sources."

"Who is ashamed to ask will never learn."

THIS MORNING

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II.

"Grass is the forgiveness of nature . . ."

Who says this column's readers are not as literate as they are alert and as alert as they are literate. No sooner do we wonder out loud here about the text of certain lines in praise of grass than five readers from as many states come forward with the answer. First to reach us with the lines complete is Superintendent B. B. Baker, of Fairfield (Ala.) city schools. They are written by the late Senator John J. Ingalls, he says, and run like this: "Grass is the forgiveness of nature—her constant benediction. Fields trampled with battle, saturated with blood, torn with the ruts of cannon, grow green again with grass, and carnage is forgotten. Streets abandoned by traffic become grass-grown like rural lanes, and are obliterated. Forests decay, harvests perish, flowers vanish, but grass is immortal. Bequeathed by the sullen hosts of winter, it withdraws into the impenetrable fortress of its seed, and its vitality emerges upon the first solicitation of spring. . . ."

"Sown by the winds, by wandering birds, propagated by the subtle horticulture of the elements which are its ministers and servants, it softens the rude outline of the world. Its tenacious fibers hold the earth in its place, and prevent its soluble components from washing into the wasting sea. It invades the solitude of deserts, climbs the inaccessible slopes and forbidden pinnacles of mountains, modifies climates, and determines the history, character and destiny of nations. . . ."

"Unobtrusive and patient, it has immortal vigor and aggression. Banished from the thoroughfare and the field, it bides its time to return, and when vigilance is relaxed, or the dynasty has perished, it silently resumes the throne from which it has been expelled but which it never abdicates. It bears no blazonry of bloom to charm the senses with fragrance of splendor, but its homely hue is more enchanting than the lily or the rose. It yields no fruit in earth or air, and yet, should its harvest fail for a single year, famine would depopulate the world."

Where is the golf player who, reading these immortal lines, will not blush for the self-consciousness that tells him to carry clubs and make a great do about hitting a little ball in order to justify his joy in a royal and returning surface? Where is the mover of lawns and fields who will not gather from the lines new delight and a more certain dignity in sweating attendance upon the eternal blades? The forgiving and returning grass! The more we think about it, the more we read Senator Ingalls' lines, the happier we are that the Lord remembered to include grass on His creation list.

Dividing things into three parts has been popular since the days of all-Gaul. Now comes Dr. Milton P. Jarnagin, head of the animal husbandry department of the University of Georgia, proposing that all of the agricultural south be divided into three parts. He thinks the poorest third of the south's land should be left in forests, the middle third devoted to permanent pasture for live stock, and the most fertile third devoted to intensive production of crops. The dense soil of permanent pastures, he says, is one of the best-known means of rebuilding eroded soil, ranking second only to continuous use of cover crops. Among many other things that appeal to us about Dr. Jarnagin's three-parted south is how stunning it would look from the roadside—fields, pastures, trees, trees, pastures, fields.

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON

THE VISION OF SERVICE.

Sunday's lesson, Mark 9:2-10, is the story of the transfiguration of Jesus and is employed by the lesson committee to emphasize the continuing theme of Christian service which we are studying this year in the Gospel of Mark. The lesson of the lesson is found in the basic truth that if we are to follow Christ in service we must constantly have the vision of the Christ.

Jesus took Peter, James and John with Him into a high mountain, likely one of the peaks of Mt. Hermon. They prayed, and as they prayed—He was transfigured before them. Space forbids a discussion of what is implied by transfiguration. It is a most interesting and important theme of study.

"His raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow"—more white, evidently, than the snow on Hermon. "And there appeared upon them Elias with Jesus," and they were talking with Jesus. What did they say? Did Peter and James and John understand all they heard? What did it mean to them? What was it intended to teach them, and us?

They went up on the mountain to worship. Up there, they received a vision. They were told to return to the valley serve. We can always see further when we are praying than at any other time. What we see in prayer can be mediated to every-day tasks.

The glory which was hinted in the moment of transfiguration was present all the while in our blessing of Lord and God, and we must to any and all who will suffer all things for the Gospel and for Him.

Matthew tells us that His face did shine as the sun. Thus we see the Son of God, surrounded by Moses and Elijah, representing the law and prophets, vividly fulfilling His own words that He is the Light of the world—that His followers are to reflect the Light of the world.

The voice from heaven saying, "This is My beloved Son, hear Him" is the key to the lesson. If we are to serve as cometh the children of God, we must dwell in Christ—Christ must dwell in us—shining through our imperfection—the Light of the world.

What we see in prayer can be mediated to every-day tasks. The glory which was hinted in the moment of transfiguration was present all the while in our blessing of Lord and God, and we must to any and all who will suffer all things for the Gospel and for Him.

Matthew tells us that His face did shine as the sun. Thus we see the

Roosevelt: On Good Neighbor

Chief Executive Writes of Buenos Aires Conference to Establish Permanent Peace Among American Republics.

His idea was embodied in a personal letter, sent on January 30, 1936, directly to the presidents of all the American countries, instead of through diplomatic channels. He adopted this unusual procedure, he said, because "the questions at issue are of such vital concern . . . as to warrant a personal interchange of views."

Following is the last of the four articles in the President's hitherto unpublished comments on the origin, growth and application of the good neighbor policy.)

ARTICLE NO. 28.

To my personal letter to the Presidents of all the other American republics, I received an immediate and enthusiastic response.

The message suggested a conference of American Republics in the interest of permanent peace on the western continent. By agreement, the capital of the Argentine Republic, Buenos Aires, was selected as the meeting place, and invitations to attend the conference were thereupon extended by the President of Argentina.

A subcommittee was created to draw up the agenda of the conference. This committee had on it representatives of each of the American republics; and each American government suggested the topics it wished to see included in the agenda.

Opening Date Set.

The program, based upon the principle of unanimity in accordance with prior precedents for inter-American conferences, was then submitted to the governing board of the Pan-American Union and was formally approved by all of the governments concerned. December 1, 1936, was set as the opening date of the session.

During the intervening time the American governments consulted with each other, with respect to specific conventions or resolutions based upon the agenda. These negotiations and discussions assisted very much in carrying on the conference in an expeditious and constructive manner, as soon as it was assembled. One of the reasons for the pronounced success of the conference was this creative democratic method of preparation for it.

I think it is fair to say that the good-neighbor policy which had been expressed by my administration not only in word, but in deed, since March 4, 1933, encouraged this conference at Buenos Aires to its most complete absence of friction, recrimination, or suspicion as to motives and objectives.

World Strife.

When I made the first suggestion for the conference, all of us had been watching with apprehension the recent events in world affairs beyond the sea. International and domestic strife, international anarchy, open violation of sacred treaties, undisguised preparation for war, unparalleled construction of armaments, selfish nationalism, economic policies of aggression and retaliation, and the breakdown abroad of democratic institutions—all these facts and trends made us realize how important it was to keep the disastrous effects of discord from the American continent.

I think that the responsible statesmen of the American republics all went to this Inter-American conference for the maintenance of peace, with a clear picture of the old world's difficulties and with a keen realization of the imperative necessity of preventing them from engulfing the Western Hemisphere.

Realizing the great importance of the conference, I decided to visit it in person. I visited Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires and Montevideo and made various speeches. I was made to feel everywhere that the good-neighbor policy of the United States which had been consistently adhered to since March 4, 1933, had dissipated the last vestige of mistrust and suspicion on the part of the other American republics toward the United States, and that there was a real bond of friendship and common interest between us.

On December 15 I returned to the United States from this conference which had such far-reaching results for the future of the American republics.

New Ties of Peace. The conference enabled the 21 American republics to create among themselves new ties of friendship and peace. From the very first it was evident that all of the American republics were unanimous in their desire for peace among themselves as well as with the rest of the world.

Three main principles dominated the conference: First, that no nation in the Western Hemisphere professed any right to threaten the peace of its neighbors; second, that the integrity of every country, large or small, would be assured; third, that renunciation of war required some method of obtaining instantaneously the co-operative effort of the entire hemisphere.

The dominant idea was that any threat to the maintenance of peace on this continent must lead to immediate consultation to seek common policies and take common measures to prevent conflict. It was the basis of the major treaties and agreements negotiated at the conference. The agreements provide a complete consultative system intended to meet the menace of conflict by the quick and active co-operation of the 21 governments.

Accords Reached.

The three most important of the numerous accords reached at Buenos Aires were the following: First, the convention to co-ordinate and extend and assure the fulfillment of the existing treaties between the American states. In this agreement the prior treaties requiring settlement of international controversies by pacific means are reaffirmed; and the nations agree to consult with each other and to co-operate toward peace. They further pledge abstinence from hostilities for six months at least during such consultation.

If any nations should become involved in controversy, they agree to report to the other American governments from time to time the progress made in the adjustment of their dispute. The agreement also provides that if war should take place between any American republics, the other American republics will consult to adopt in their characters as neutrals a common attitude.

Second, the convention for the maintenance, preservation and re-establishment of peace. In this treaty the various American governments pledge consultation with each other whenever the peace of the Americas is menaced and in the event of an international war outside America which might menace the peace of the American republics.

Third, the additional protocol relative to nonintervention. This agreement reaffirms the convention of Montevideo in 1933, which contained the fundamental principle that "no state has the right to intervene in the internal or external affairs of others."

In addition to the foregoing three principal agreements, there were a number of other significant and far-reaching accords and resolutions designed to stimulate trade, cultural interchange and improve communication. During this session of three weeks the conference unanimously adopted a total of 11 treaties and conventions, 62 resolutions and declarations.

The Buenos Aires conference is proof that in a world which is beset with rumors and threats of war, governments determined to keep alive the spirit of peace and willing to renew mutual trust and friendship can move together in a co-operative search for the means of enduring peace.

BRAZIL TO RESUME PAYMENT ON DEBTS

President Says Only Trade Balance Is Awaited.

SAO LOURENCO, Brazil, April 22.—(UP)—Payments on Brazil's foreign debt, suspended last November, will be resumed "within a short time," President Getulio Vargas said today.

The President said at a press conference at his summer residence here that the suspension was only "temporary" and that "readjustment of Brazilian economy will permit resumption within a short time of all payments as soon as exports result in a substantial favorable trade balance."

If the exports do not leave a surplus for payment of the foreign debt, the President added, there "only remains for us to nationalize the debt by conversion bonds in national currency, although future circumstances may yet permit an opportunity for joint study with interested parties of any other solution."

SECURITY TAXES DIVERSION SOUGHT

Colonel Knox Asks Suspension During Slump.

WICHITA, Kas., April 22.—(UP)—Colonel Frank Knox proposed tonight that social security taxes be suspended for the duration of the current business slump with the stipulation that the money saved be used in providing work for idle men and women.

Such a step, he said in a speech prepared for delivery before a Republican rally, would make available more than $1,500,000,000 exclusively for re-employment of men now out of work and there would be no corresponding increase in taxes or public debt.

"It would put men to work," Knox said, "in regular jobs, at regular pay—not a starvation wage on some bonedogging WPA project. It would not cost a cent for supervision, thus saving the waste and extravagance that have very uniformly characterized unemployment relief."

Brown said today.

The accident occurred near Montrose.

Five other persons riding in the same car with McCrimmon were hurt.

BRITAIN AND ERIN REACH AGREEMENT

Pact Said To Have Settled Differences Over Tariff and Land Annuities.

LONDON, April 22.—(AP)—Great Britain and Ireland today reached an agreement they hoped would end years of bickering.

An announcement by the Dominion office said the accord had been concluded, but gave no details.

Drafted after three months of negotiations headed by British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and Irish Prime Minister Eamon de Valera, the agreement will be signed Monday.

Reliable but unofficial sources in Dublin said the new agreement settled the long-standing annuities and tariff differences between the two countries. It was believed, however, that one major issue—De Valera's dream for a united Ireland—was left, untouched, at least for the present.

Economic differences between the two countries date back to 1932, when De Valera, then Irish Free State President, withheld payment of land annuities to Great Britain amounting to 5,000,000 pounds ($25,000,000) yearly, for advances made by Britain to enable Irish tenants to buy land.

In the settlement today, Ireland was said to have agreed to spend a specified annual sum for defense in lieu of the annuity payments.

The tariff war precipitated by the annuities question was said to have been settled with a promise from Britain to abolish high duties on Irish agricultural products while Ireland scaled down tariffs in favor of British manufactured products.

The election of Dr. Douglas Hyde, a Protestant, became a certainty when Alfred (Alfie) Byrne, Dublin's lord mayor, decided to abandon his plans to run as an independent candidate. It was stated officially that the Labor party approved the selection of Dr. Hyde by the two major parties—De Valera's Fianna Fail and William T. Cosgrave's Fine Gael.

His selection also was given "the most cordial endorsement" of Cardinal MacCarthy, Catholic primate of all Ireland.

RENEWED PLEDGES URGED BY NEWTON

Church Holds Solution to All World Problems, Atlanta Pastor Declares.

CARROLLTON, Ga., April 22.—(AP)—"Christianity is the one adequate and abiding answer to an ever-changing world," Dr. Louis D. Newton, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist Church of Atlanta, said today in an address prepared for the Georgia Baptist Sunday School Convention.

"In a day when secular Messiahs are claiming control of the destiny of nations, when Communism, Fascism, Nazism, humanism and all the other isms are struggling for a place in the sun, it is well for us to take stock and renew our covenants of faith in the Son of God—the same yesterday, today and forever," he declared.

Every problem the world faces today, he said, including economic, social, political and religious, can be frankly and amicably solved "if we are willing to take God at His word, applying the eternal principles of the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount. But before the world can comprehend these doctrines of successful living, there must first come the redeemed, changed individual."

LABOR RE-ELECTS GRAMLING AS HEAD

Federation Selects Augusta as Site for Its 1939 Convention.

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 22.—(P)—Georgia Federation of Labor delegates—ironing out any differences in caucuses—re-elected President Chas. E. Gramling, and named other officers by unanimous vote today.

Also re-elected were Secretary-Treasurer Rufus B. Johnson, of Atlanta; and Vice-President Fred K. Stephens, of the Atlanta district; George H. McGee, of the Savannah district, and F. M. Maxwell, of the Rome district.

F. J. Pritchard was elected vice president of the Augusta district, and W. C. Jeffries of the Columbus district, succeeding respectively G. R. Maloney and T. M. Mick-

Dave F. Allen, of Savannah, was named delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention and Frank A. White, of Augusta, was chosen as alternate.

The Georgia state convention will meet in Augusta next year.

The dispatch with which the slate was approved was in contrast to tumultuous events of the 1937 convention in Atlanta, when delegations split over the refusal of A. Steve Nance to resign as southern representative of the CIO's textile workers organizing committee.

Approved without a discussion was a demand that O. E. Petry, secretary-treasurer of the Nance faction, surrender any property of the GFOL in his possession. Arguments of the closing session were confined to other things.

Backed by Savannah union members who have a controversy with a local electric and power company, the convention adopted a resolution "to support central bodies and communities seeking electric service from the Santee-Cedar-River project."

Delegates from locals of other utilities opposed the measure, arguing that transmission of power here from the project site near Charleston, S. C., would be a wedge for government lines all over the state.

A recommendation that women be made eligible for jury duty in Georgia was approved over the protest of Mrs. M. E. Sewell, of Atlanta.

HARTSFIELD NAMES GROUP TO STUDY PUBLIC PROJECTS

Citizens and Council Members To Survey Uses for Federal Money.

A 10-man committee to study the civic needs of Atlanta with the view of obtaining federal aid for public projects was appointed yesterday by Mayor Hartsfield as he vetoed three actions of city council Monday.

Alderman Roy E. Callaway, who introduced the resolution to set up the study committee, was named chairman of the group. Preston S. Arkwright, power company president; Raymond W. Torres, city planning engineer; Frank H. Neely, department store executive; J. A. (Gus) Harper, labor leader; and J. H. Merritt, West End businessman, were named by the mayor to serve with Callaway. Alderman Ed A. Gilliam and Councilmen Howard Haire, Frank Beck and William Knight.

The group will consider such projects as street widening, grade-crossing elimination, bridges, and other public improvements. Mayor Hartsfield disapproved an amendment to the building code to allow erection of signs not larger than 34 inches by 60 inches without permission of the city building inspector. Councilman J. Allen Couch introduced it, saying businessmen generally disregard the present law.

The mayor's veto was applied also to a resolution which would have raised the salaries of four employees in the sewer disposal plant. Hartsfield explained that the budget commission set up salaries for negro employees but that white men were employed. Efforts to raise their pay some time ago failed when council sustained a previous Hartsfield veto.

A beer and wine permit for Murray W. Harmon, at 1010 Pryor street, was vetoed. Hartsfield pointed out the place had been raided many times and said a councilman told him it exerted a bad influence.

INFLATION TREND FEARED BY LONDON

Kansas Says Hope of Nation Lies in Congress.

TOPEKA, Kas., April 22.—(UP)—Alf M. Landon warned today the administration is "again upon an inflationary course" and that such a path "ultimately leads to only one end—bankruptcy."

The former Republican candidate for president did not appear here because of the illness of his father, John M. Landon, 81, in Kansas City, Mo., and his club address before the Optimist Club was read by Justice Hugo Wedell of the state supreme court.

"The time may be long, or it may be very short, before the day of reckoning comes to us," Landon's speech read, "the hope of the nation lies in congress, backed by an articulate citizenry, to continue to take action and assume leadership."

COMMUNION ALLOWED TO PASTOR Foe OF NAZI

BERLIN, April 22.—(AP)—The Rev. Martin Niemöller, according to information just received by his congregation, was permitted to take the Lord's Supper a few days ago in his cell in Sachsenhausen concentration camp near Oranienburg.

The Protestant pastor, opponent of Nazi ideologies, was convicted March 2 of speaking against government leaders and violating pulp regulations. The court sentenced him to seven months in jail, but held the sentence already had been liquidated by his detention before trial.

He was "technically freed, but immediately placed in 'protective custody.'" The authoritative explanation was that "public excitement over the lenient sentence" might lead to demonstrations against pastor.)

PLAN WOULD OUTLAW FLORIDA 'GATOR TRADE'

MIAMI, Fla., April 22.—(AP)—Fire wardens expressed hope tonight that fires which have burned wide expanses of the parched Everglades recently but now are smoldering out would give impetus to a movement to outlaw the alligator hunting industry in this state.

Blaming the hunters for starting most of the fires, they said conservation interests were supporting the move and that an effort would be made at the next session of the legislature to make the taking of live 'gators or the selling of hides and other products illegal.

Here is F. Warren Pershing, only son of General Pershing, and his bride, the former Muriel Bache Richards, as they left a New York church yesterday to the acclaim of 2,000 persons within and hundreds without. The bride's train reached the length of six pews as she walked to the altar. General Pershing, erect and soldierly, watched the ceremonies.

Pershing—Erect and Soldierly—Watches Wedding of His Only Son

Fashionable Crowd of 2,000 Fill St. Thomas' Protestant Episcopal Church for Ceremonies; Bride's Train Trails Six Pews Long.

NEW YORK, April 22.—(AP)—General John J. Pershing stood today as erect and soldierly, as when he led America's armies to victory in 1917, and saw the marriage of his only son, Warren, to Muriel Bache Richards.

The first smile of the bride, granddaughter of Jules S. Bache, financier and art patron, as she left the altar with her tall young husband, was for the 78-year-old general who traveled from Arizona to see the wedding after triumphing over a severe illness.

The fashionable crowd of 2,000 that filled St. Thomas' Protestant Episcopal church rose in spontaneous tribute when the white-haired commander of the A. E. F. entered from a side door with his physician and crossed to a front pew.

MOTORIST KILLED; THOUGHT BURGLAR

Farmer Shoots Through Door at Night Caller.

OPELOUSAS, La., April 22.—(AP)—O. R. Dewees, 30, Continental Oil Company employee of Ponca City, Okla., was reported mistaken for a burglar and shot and killed today when he went to a farmhouse to seek help with a stalled automobile.

Officers said he was shot through the door when, accompanied by a woman companion, he knocked at the house of Alcide Pellerin, farmer living several miles south of Opelousas. Pellerin said that when Dewees did not answer his call for identification, he thought he was a burglar.

Pellerin, who thought the shot frightened the supposed intruder away, so he went back to bed. Dewees's body, a bullet through the heart, was found outside in the morning.

Grave Seals Last Clue To Tricolor's Unknown

PARIS, April 22.—(UP)—Major Louis Le Spinasse, 70, the only man who had a clue to the identity of France's Unknown Soldier or known what battlefield the body was taken to rest beneath the Arc de Triomphe, died last night.

In 1920, Le Spinasse was placed in command of a guard over eight coffins, one of which was to be chosen as that of the anonymous national hero. He alone knew the origin of each body.

the mouth of the shaft down the mountainside. A witness saw timber "just raining" after the blast. Dewey Runyan, tipple foreman, estimated between 50 and 75 miners were in the shaft when the explosion occurred.

State Police Sergeant P. L. Sprenger, of Roanoke, who was at a filling station on the highway near the mine, hastened to the scene. He said miners were calmly helping rescue crews to open the blocked shaft, early tonight.

There are 21 entries in the operation. It was not known through how many passages the smoke and flames ran.

A farmer residing a half-mile from Keen mountain said the explosion rocked his home. He notified employees of the Norfolk & Western railroad, who sent out the calls news.

Calls for rescue crews were sent to near-by Virginia and West Virginia cities. N. P. Rhinehart, chief of the West Virginia department of mines at Charleston said two West Virginia crews were en route and others were in readiness.

The Red Jacket mine is on a narrow mountain road from Grundy, which delayed crews in making their way to the scene. There is only one telephone line to the mine itself and this village is connected to the outside world by a single trunk telephone circuit.

PROBE IS ORDERED IN COERCION CHARGE

Guffey Accused of Intimidating WPA Workers in Pennsylvania.

A cross-fire of charges in Pennsylvania's Democratic factional primary fight tonight resulted in an investigation by the Works Progress Administration.

Several hours after John B. Kelly, chairman of the Philadelphia Democratic organization, accused Senator Joseph F. Guffey, Democrat, Pennsylvania, of political coercion among WPA workers in Pennsylvania, Aubrey Williams, deputy WPA administrator, announced in Washington that "any specific charges will be immediately investigated and, if found, summary action will be taken."

Williams acted after the White House had turned over to him a telegram from Kelly to President Roosevelt asking for an inquiry by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, so that "facts may be ascertained and prosecutions instituted."

"I'm satisfied that the WPA is starting it," said Kelly tonight when he learned of Williams' action.

SHIPPER OF GOATS CONVICTED, FREED

Conspiracy Charges Against Georgians Dropped.

NEW YORK, April 22.—(AP)—William Faircloth, 23, of Metter, Ga., driver of a truck that brought six-week-old goats to New York April 10, was convicted of cruelty to animals today and given a suspended sentence. He already had spent 12 days in jail.

Charges of conspiracy and violation of the sanitary code against Faircloth; his helper, Jesse Philter, 27, also of Metter, and Frank Petty, 18, a local butcher, were dismissed by the court.

Joseph Fucile, 57, and his son, Letterio, 27, New York butchers to whom the goats were consigned, were held in bail for trial on conspiracy charges and were paroled on charges of sanitary code violations.

The animals were to have been killed for sale to Italians for the Easter holidays.

The American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals had entered the case, complaining the goats were puny and ill kept.

National Anthem Revision Barred By Radio Station

PHILADELPHIA, April 22.—(AP) Vincent Lopez' new version of the "Star-Spangled Banner," eliminating some of the high notes, was banned today by a Philadelphia radio station.

"We would no more permit an unfamiliar version to be broadcast than we would display a new and unauthorized American flag," Stan Lee Broza, program director, said.

The orchestra leader's version was designed to make the national anthem easier to sing.

FRANCE CONTINUES ARRESTS IN TUNISIA

PARIS, April 22.—(AP)—French troops and police continued wholesale arrests today in Tunisia, French North African protectorate, in an effort to crush the Neo-Destour organization of nationalist natives.

At least 1,000 persons have been arrested since rising, in which 12 persons were killed, broke out April 10. The disorder followed upon a proclamation by the nationalist natives that they would seize civil and military prisons unless one of their arrested leaders, Ali Belhane, was released.

Dr. Dafoe Hints Cash Is Interest Of Papa Dionne

OTTAWA, April 22.—(Canadian Press)—Reunion of the Dionne quintuplets with their family was said today by Henri St. Jacques, attorney for Oliva Dionne, to be the motive behind his request for a judicial investigation of their guardianship.

St. Jacques, who announced last night that acting in behalf of the quintuplets' father he had asked for an inquiry, said Dionne would seek to regain custody of the five little girls, taken out of his hands two months after their birth nearly four years ago.

Gordon Conant, attorney general of Ontario, said he would take no action on Dionne's request for an investigation until he had studied a recent report by Percy D. Wilson, official guardian of minor children in Ontario.

Conant said Wilson's report, based on an investigation requested by Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, the little girls' physician, had reached his office only this week.

Wilson is on the board of guardians along with Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, Dionne and Judge J. A. Valin, of North Bay, Ont.

Dr. Dafoe, in Callender, said: "Now that the quints have $600,000 there is a strong interest being shown in them."

"I might say that Mr. Dionne is one of the guardians and he hasn't attended a meeting of the guardians for more than a year. If he has any objections to make, it is his duty to attend the meetings and make them known. We always notify him of the meetings by registered mail."

Detroit Crowd Tops Record by 15,000; Harder Wins.

By ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Before a record Detroit attendance crowd of 55,000, the Cleveland Indians nosed out the Tigers, 4 to 3, yesterday behind the eight-hit pitching of Mel Harder. Tommy Bridges started for Detroit but gave way to Schoolboy Rowe in the fifth.

The Yankees opened their home stadium for the season before 25,000 fans by walloping the Washington Senators, 7 to 0, behind the classy four-hit pitching of Red Ruffing. Frank Crosetti's double with the bases loaded in the eighth inning featured the Yanks' nine-hit attack.

The game was delayed for 20 minutes when Acting Mayor Newbold Morris, who was to officiate at the opening ceremonies, refused to cross a picket line.

Thousands of fans stomped and yelled during the delay. Finally Morris, Republican president of the city council acting in LaGuardia's absence in the west, walked in beside Colonel Jacob Ruppert, Yankees' president, as the band played "The Star-Spangled Banner" and the 1937 world champion pennant was raised to the masthead.

Then Morris threw out the first ball and the game started. The Chicago White Sox and the St. Louis Browns battled through 13 innings before the Sox got the run needed to win, 4 to 3, and spoil the home opening of Gabby Street's team.

And it was Pitcher Clint Brown, who relieved Thornton Lee in the eighth, who started the rally that brought victory. Brown doubled to open the thirteenth. Minton Hayes fled to Ethan Allen. Jack Knott, the Browns' pitcher, tossed out Mike Kreevich, Brown moving to third. Then Henry Steinbacher singled Brown home.

The official paid attendance was 54,444.

JACKETS DEFEAT GAMECOCKS, 7-2, FOR 3D STRAIGHT

Busby Steals Home in Third; Teams Play Again Today.

By TOM McRAE.

Georgia Tech won its third straight game yesterday, defeating the University of South Carolina, 7 to 2, behind the seven-hit pitching of Jack Chivington.

The Jackets won the game in the third when they scored runs, one of them coming when Floyd Busby stole home with the Gamecock catcher standing on the plate arguing with the umpire.

Both teams tallied in the first, Carolina getting two and Tech one. Lowry walked and Ed Clary, of the Gaffney S. C., football-playing Clary, hit the longest ball of the year at the Rose Bowl field. His terrific drive went far down the right field line, landing on the bank. This homer, bringing in Lowry, was so far there was no S. C. catcher to catch it. Billy Gibson's double scored Page, who had walked for the Tech tally.

Tech came back in the third with three runs. Appleby singled. Jordan was hit by a pitched ball. Gibson forced Jordan at second, Ebdon walked, filling the bases. Busby apparently was supposed to bunt, for Appleby came tearing into the plate, but Busby didn't hit the ball and Appleby was out by about 10 feet. Busby then walked, filling the bases. Jones singled, scoring Gibson and Ebdon. Then Busby pulled his steal of home to end the scoring.

Bobby Dodd's nine got three more in the seventh on hits by Gibson, Jones and Chivington, and a Gamecock error.

Coach Vernon Smith said Louis Tabor will be on the mound for the Gamecocks today. Bobby Dodd said either Jim Corbett or Neil Cavette will pitch for Tech.

"What would you suggest I take?"

"The 4:5 train, sir," said the caddy.

It is very fortunate there are no Scots about the annual Atlanta newspaper tournament. With the exception of a half dozen men in the first flight, there are more bad golfers in this tournament and were they all to take the 4:5 train when badly and often bunkered, there would be need of special trains and extra sections.

for Growers.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAM
WASHINGTON, April 2.
Convinced that the new farm control act is placing an unfair and unjust burden on tobacco growers of Georgia, Representative E.
W. Deen, of Alma, a farmer himself, said here today that growers should be allowed to plant what they please with-

He believes the present law contains many provisions which will seriously handicap not only tobacco growers in Georgia but tobacco growers as well.

"The allotment of acreage to state of both cotton and tobacco," Mr. Deen said, "is entirely small when based on the acreage allotted to the Officials Not to Blame.

"Since returning to my office in Washington last week after a brief illness, I have endeavored to make some investigation of what must be done to bring a measure of relief to tobacco growers of Georgia. I have found the fact is being ministered by officials of the Department of Agriculture in accordance with its true provisions, and do not believe any blame can be rightfully placed on denards.

heads, but rather on those passed the bill.

"Of course, I was absent a year, and although had I here I do not know that I have changed the situation regard to tobacco, I do know everything within my power in the extra session of the congress to induce the leadership the house and senate members accept a suggested plan which offered.

Deen's Own Plan.

"My plan provided that far be allowed to plant what pleased, and as much as pleased, and that the federal government, with revenue obtained from agricultural commodities exported into the United States, to the farmers of all basic crops, the difference in the market and parity when they sold or consumed in the United States. The plan also would allow farmers to sell the balance of their pro-

Mr. Deen explained that the 75 members of congress met and discussed his plan at length on several occasions, and that a similar to his was presented in senate but was rejected by houses.

"Only Sensible Plan."

"As I view the farming situation now," he continued, "plan is the only sensible and way of trying to approach a solution of the agricultural problem and I believe both the country and the country will eventually have to adopt this or a similar plan.

"In 1936, the United States consumed approximately 65 per cent of the cotton produced here. On that basis, under the plan I proposed a farmer would be paid a difference in the market price of cotton at the time he sold his crop and parity, which is around 17 cents, on 65 per cent of what he produced. He would be allowed to sell the chance of his crop without any restrictions for what he could get for it at world market prices.

"The plan is not unreasonable because industry is given protection by means of the tariff. In event farmers were paid parity—that part of their crop consumed in the United States, they would have purchasing power equal to those who work in industry."

Gov. Rivers Urges P.-T. A. to Aid In Reducing Illiteracy by 1940

ALBANY, Ga., April 22.—(P)—Governor E. D. Rivers told members of Georgia Congress of Teachers and Parents at the closing convention session Friday morning that the standards of Georgia are being lifted through the school program, adult educational program and the extending of vocational training in high schools.

The present state administration is majoring in education, Governor Rivers said. He called on the Parent-Teacher Congress to aid in furthering the program which has as its aim the reduction of illiteracy in the state to 1 per cent by 1940 when the federal census will be taken.

Governor Rivers reviewed what has been done in the cause of education in the state in the last 15 months, touching on free school books, seven-month minimum term and teachers' salary schedule.

"What we must have now is a comprehensive library system of the schools in Georgia," he said. "We are going forward with this program."

The eradication of adult illiteracy is an important program which must continue to receive emphasis, he stated.

The free school book program has proven to be sound economically, he said, explaining that formerly $4,000,000 was spent annually by parents for school books. The state last year bought more books for all children for $3,500,000. In the future it will cost a million dollars annually to replace and repair and add to the present books.

"Fifteen months ago our sister states pointed the finger of scorn at us, but now they look to us for guidance in an educational program," he asserted.

Resolutions read at Thursday's session were approved. They included one to assist the state department in extension of health units in each county; mental hygiene program; immunization against typhoid and diphtheria and other preventable diseases and in the current campaign against venereal diseases.

Others included the following, which the congress expects to work for: Compulsory school age to be raised to 16 years; endeavor to create public opinion favoring suppressing of gambling; enforcement of Georgia law for safety on the highways, including the displaying of reflectors or lights on vehicles at night, and others.

MY DAY

HAMPTON, Va., Thursday.—We took the ferry yesterday afternoon and landed in Yorktown, Va., where we went to see the Nelson house. This carries me back to the days of the World War. On one occasion my husband and I went with a party on the Sylph to visit the fleet which was anchored off Yorktown. That was the last time I had seen this very beautiful old house. Though the house is open to the public, the owners still use certain rooms and all the rooms have a lived-in atmosphere. There is a small house on the grounds which the family uses when it is there. The oldest house of all was not built of brick, but of white clapboards, and has just as much charm as the others.

I have been trying to analyze why these gardens in Virginia seem to have such a particular charm of their own and have come to the conclusion that it is largely because they have such unexpected places of seclusion. For instance, at the foot of this garden there is a tree growing in the middle of a little brick floor circle with a hedge around it high enough to shield people from prying eyes. To be sure, the old-fashioned iron seats would not fulfill our modern idea of comfort, but I can imagine that for many generations people have retreated to these little lost spots with a book or a bit of sewing or a friend with whom they wish to converse at ease.

There was a covered arched way which had space for seats on either side out into the hedge. No one would have been discovered sitting there, unless you actually walked up the path.

By the time we reached Williamsburg, our first thought was to find a telegraph office and, luckily, we came in on the main street and found one. Even the desire for sight-seeing, once the column was filed, was subordinate to the desire for something to drink, and we invaded the first restaurant we found and indulged in ice cream sodas. We all gloated over the fact that we had no business to take anything so fattening.

I was reminded of the story of a friend of mine who ate a piece of candy before a very young lady remarked: "I really shouldn't eat it, but I will this once." Whereupon the child said: "All you grown-ups are so funny. You always say you shouldn't do things and then you do them just the same." And so we enjoyed our sodas.

Then we wandered down to look over William and Mary College. We paid particular attention to the Christopher Wren building. It appears that one of the NYA projects in Williamsburg is to provide student guides to show the numerous visitors around. Our young guide proved very efficient and entertaining. In telling us about the portraits in one of the only lady reproduced on the wall. It appears she was a lady of unpleasant disposition who made the lives of those around her very disagreeable, though her face looks as if she must have had much character and some humor.

Your Figure, Madame

By IDA JEAN KAIN.

EXERCISE IF YOU WANT TO CHANGE YOUR MEASUREMENTS.

Exercise does such lovely things for the figure! It is truly amazing how much you can improve your proportions—and how quickly—on a program of daily exercise, planned especially for your figure.

Just let me tell you about one determined young woman who, with a loss of only 10 pounds, slimmed two inches off the hips, two off the waistline and half an inch off the bust measurement. Ten pounds is not a very great weight loss, but while dieting moderately this reducer really worked at her exercise. She began with just five minutes a day and gradually increased the time allowance until she was exercising for 45 minutes every day. She had selected exercises that are strenuous, so the 45 minutes was divided into two periods, one in the morning and the other in the evening.

This Exercise Is Excellent for Posture and Figure.

As often happens even on the best regulated exercise program, this young woman did not begin to see results right away. At the end of three weeks her measurements were the same as at the beginning, but she kept on. Besides, she found that exercise made her feel good! At the end of three more weeks, the waist and hips were two inches less and her figure perfect.

Had this young woman confined her efforts at reducing to a strict diet, more than likely all the weight would have been lost from the upper part of her body. By concentrating on exercises for the hips and waist, she managed to take the weight off exactly as she pleased.

Any figure can be improved with exercise, but this is especially true for the women whose weight is within 10 per cent of normal. That amount of excess weight is small. Properly distributed, it would not be noticeable, but when the measurements are out of proportion an extra pound on a hipline already too large can make the figure problem seem worse than it is. Don't feel hopeless about your figure. There is nothing wrong with it that cannot be fixed with exercise, and if your weight is nearly normal, so much the better.

You will have to take your measurements and decide where you need slimming and where you need building up. You must overlook the fact that you can do both with the proper exercise. While taking a tuck in the waistline you can fill out the chest and raise the bust contour, and there are exercises that will help you to do these two things in two leaflets, "Stretch the Fat from Waistline, Ribs, Wishbone" and "Bust Development Exercises." If the hipline is your particular worry, send for the hip reducing exercise leaflet, "Hips, Hips—Away!"

Here is an excellent posture and figure exercise that could well be practiced by even the woman with perfect figures:

Position: Stand against the wall, arms stretched high overhead and against wall. Have the heels as close to the wall as you can get them, and still have the small of the back flat against the wall. In order to do this you may at first have to place the heels a few inches away from the wall.

Movement: Keeping the entire back flat against the wall—hips, small of back, nape of neck and back of head—bend the body side-ward. Hold for a moment, return to the upward stretching position, and bend to the other side.

NO. 1528.

A tailored frock like this is as necessary as sunshine to a happy summer. You'll want it for business, shopping, travel, beach wear—all informal outdoor moments. Piping on the collar and down the front, to match the buttons and belt buckle—that's all the trimming it needs. The action pleat in the skirt, the trim shoulder yoke, are correct and comfortable tailored details.

The model is photographed in a tailored Lady Pepperell cotton, with a chevron pattern. Gingham, linen, percale and pique are nice choice for it, too. A dress so simple may appropriately be made in a dashing color or design, but you will want at least one white version of 1528, with pipings and buttons of bright red, blue or green.

It's exceptionally easy to make, for the pattern includes a detailed sew chart. In our new pattern book are loads more, just as attractive.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1528 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Corresponding bust measurements 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 (34) requires 3-3/4 yards of 35-inch material, with 11-1/4 yards of bias fold or braided trim.

Pattern No. 1528 can be purchased for 15 cents. Please remit in coins, giving your name, address, pattern number and size. Do not send stamps.

Pleasant Homes

By ELIZABETH McRAE BOYKIN.

Picture frames for snapshots to go on my What-not.

Monday—To see an exhibit of old Chinese wallpaper panels depicting the history of tea. One of my pet hobbies—two of them rather . . . wallpaper and tea. Do you know that tea once sold for $80 a pound in London?

Tuesday—Writing this morning. Then busy on curtains for the studio this afternoon. These had to be made so they could be pushed out of the way to let in all the light possible when needed. Cranes for the side hangings were the answer there. Then under curtains to draw back.

Wednesday—To the country to photograph the home of Henry Varnum Poor, the artist and potter. He built the house himself, stone on stone, and a delightful place it is too. His wife is Bessie Breuer who has a new novel out this spring. They actually have done what the rest of us only talk about, and that is return to the simple life. The kitchen stove is an old-time coal range; the sink is a hollowed out slab of stone with a depression in its center and a hole bored in it for a drain. A faucet over this provides the water. Mr. Poor made most of the furniture and all of the tiles for the house. What's more, they've lived here 20 years and raised a pair of impressive children here in their woods, so the idea is no fad.

Thursday—Shopped for picture frames today. Found two wide wood ones in oval shape about 10 inches top to bottom, rather old-fashioned looking, to use on either side of an oval wood framed mirror that hangs over a chest of drawers. They'll frame old family photographs. Also picked up several small frames to hold snapshot photos, they'll go on my What-not.

Friday—Hendrick Van Loon's wife should take a few bows along with her famous and fascinating husband. She has a slight lithe figure and white hair cut short and worn close to her head. She works right along with him on his books, typing, researching, organizing, editing. And keeping a pleasant hospitable home in the bargain. Her name is Helen and most people, including her husband, call her Jimmy. She used to be a school teacher, so did he.

Too Much Spaghetti.

Saturday—Burned tons, well maybe bushels, of old magazines, clippings, circulars, notes, letters. What a bonfire we had! We were clearing out a store room in the basement. Had to stop before we were finished because unexpected guests came in for tea. And when they were gone, we had to dash to dress to go to a spaghetti supper at a neighbor's home. But alas, we all ate so much spaghetti we felt too doopey for any very exciting conversation.

Sunday—Up very early to finish that basement job before church. Then to Sunday dinner at the home of relations—10 around the table for fried chicken and strawberry shortcake, not counting children and dogs who had their own party on the back porch. I admired the grown-ups' table, long and handsome with a point Venice cloth and rows of small glass globes down the center with violets and valley lilies in them. Especially nice because you could see over them comfortably.

ACES IN LEAD

By W. W. ANDERSON.

NEW YORK, April 22.—(AP)—The Four Aces, defending holders of the Vanderbilt contract bridge trophy, and the Cavendish Club team they beat in the last round in 1937, loomed tonight as 1938 finalists by taking wide leads over semi-final opponents in the national team-of-four championship play.

The Aces—Oswald Jacoby, Howard Schenken, M. D. Maier and David Burnstine—pushed out in front of the Mayfair Club team by 2,690 points after 45 of the 60 semi-final round boards.

In the other bracket, the Cavendish Club quartet, captained by Waldemar K. von Zedtwitz, led the team of Sam Katz, of Newark, N. J., and four New Yorkers, including Bert Lebar, increasing their 1,100-point lead after 20 boards to 2,130 when 30 had been played.

Jacoby and his mates, 40 points down to the Mayfair group—Fred D. Kaplan, Irving Epstein, Harold Ziman, Jesse Selt and Sam Stayman—after 15 boards, staged a comeback to move far in front at the three-quarter mark.

Play will suspend after tonight until April 26 and 27—when the 72-board finals will be played—to make way for the national masters' individual tournament Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Avondale Flower Show.

Of interest to flower lovers will be the flower show of the Avondale Garden Club on April 27 at the Community clubhouse in Avondale Estates. Judges will be Mrs. Stanley Hastings, Mrs. Fletcher Pearson Crown and Nelson Crist.

Doors will be open to the public from 3 o'clock in the afternoon until 9:30 in the evening. There will be no admission charge.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and have finally succeeded in getting it straight. In 1910, Edgar Selwyn met Samuel Goldwyn—only it was then Mr. Goldfish. Well, Mr. Selwyn—I mean Mr. Selwyn—and Goldfish put the first and last part of their new names together and started Goldwyn pictures, which was later absorbed by Mr. Mayer and his Metro, without Goldfish (now Mr. Goldwyn), who had left in a huff. Selwyn is now a producer under Mayer. Samuel Goldwyn is making pictures under his own name, or rather his name and that of Selwyn's. And has vowed that never, while he lives, will he set foot inside the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio.

What type are you? What role will you play in the exciting drama, life? Your palm tells.

If it's like the palm at the top of our picture, you're an alluring, happy type. The forked heart line hints you've strong affections. The lucky star says that you easily win affection in return. But, says that straight heart line, running parallel to the heart line, you're a prudent lass, too. And the unbroken fate line promises a long, happy life, free of setbacks.

Is there trouble in store if you've a palm like the emotional girl in the center? It depends. The vivid imagination implied by a dipping head line may serve you well. But watch it if you've the long heart line of jealousy. You may imagine too much, wreck a love affair. The broken fate line says obstacles ahead, the broken life line, an illness.

Do fame and money lure you? Let's hope you have the third palm with the fate line branching to the first and third fingers—a sign of a brilliant career. The heart and head line close together say you'll always keep your head. The lucky star below the third finger means money!

HEALTH TALKS

By DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

AFTER ALL, IT IS A QUESTION OF ADRENIN.

A doctor in practice has certain advantages over a doctor in print. For example a doctor in practice is comparatively safe in saying what he thinks about the matter of examining the eyes for failing vision and prescribing for whatever ails the patient.

From experience I know it is safe and sometimes apparently sound for a doctor in practice to advise a distracted mother to try a dose of the gad on a wayward and defiant daughter in her early teens. In print, however, he can't do it south of the 33rd parallel. I have been given to understand.

Is there any difference between physical courage and mental or so-called "moral" courage? For example, could a person have sufficient courage to fight with a menacing intruder or to face great danger in order to defend or help another who could not defend or help himself, yet lack the "moral" courage to uphold a view or a belief he believed to be right, against any and all opposition? Or on the other hand, could a person be conspicuously courageous in taking his stand on some great moral question of ethics or religion or social economy, yet prove cowardly in respect to a personal danger?

My own answer is "No." Courage is courage, and fear is fear. It all depends on the amount of adrenin secreted by the adrenal glands and poured into the blood under the emotional stress. If the adrenal function is deficient, the person will not have much courage of any kind. If the adrenal function is not too greatly inhibited or restrained, or weakened by long educational and cultural training and by the constant inhibitions imposed by civilization with its necessity for dissembling, concealing or repressing primitive emotions, the individual will have sufficient courage for most emergencies, physical or moral.

A certain schoolmaster had the right idea. He staged regular boxing bouts between evenly matched boys, as the many way to settle their quarrels. The system worked beautifully until one refused to accept the decision against him, went home boo-hoing to his misguided parents and created a furor in the community, which put an end to an excellent system of training.

INSTALLMENT XVI.

Sylvia looked back over her shoulder quickly, as if there might be something behind her.

"I thought—I was going to—I felt—"

She shivered again, then went back to powdering her face. "I don't generally put any color on, but I think I'd better have a little—don't you?"

Gay said, "Yes, I think so."

"But I'm sure it will be all right really. I mean, if I do what this Zero wants me to do this time, he won't ever ask me anything again—he's absolutely promised that. You see, he says the letters are really his and Francis won't let him have them. And, of course, he says, he could go to law and get them that way, but it would cost such a lot that we might all be ruined, so it's much better for me to do what he wants, and I've told him it's no good his thinking I'll do anything more, because I won't. I really feel quite all right about it now."

She got up, smiled at her own reflection, slipped her arm into Gay's, and said, "I don't know what made me feel like that. It was horrid—just as if something dreadful was going to happen."

It was the next day that it began to dawn upon Algy that Brewster was sorry for him. The remoteness of Carsars continued. The atmosphere of the office was glacial in the extreme. Brewster, in the capacity of intermediary, wore a worried and deprecating air. Impossible as the day wore on to escape the conviction that Brewster was being kind. In the role of Samaritan Algy found him frankly intolerable. He preferred him as the human encyclopedia. This being Saturday, there was, however, only half a day to be endured. There was hope that the kindness of Brewster might have expended itself before they met again on Monday morning. Possibly, though not probably, Carsars might have thawed. Anyhow, whatever had happened or was going to happen, Algy intended to play golf. He had a conviction that fresh air and exercise were most urgently required.

The new Bentley had never run better. He returned to town a good deal soothed. He had played like an angel.

He came whistling up the stairs, and was arrested half way by Barker, who emerged soundlessly from the dining room and informed him that a lady had been ringing him up—"No name, sir, and no message, except that she said she would be ringing again later."

Algy went to his room and proceeded to have a bath. When the telephone bell rang he cursed it bitterly. Never is a hot bath so agreeable as when you have to leave it. Algy dripped, Algy cursed, Algy contorted his agreeable features into a scowl. He said, "Who is it?" in the voice that means "Why weren't you drowned at birth?" and heard Gay Hardwick say rather breathlessly:

"Oh, Algy, is that you?"

"It's me," Algy replied, the scowl subsiding into a mere frown. "I'm dripping all over the Barkers' new carpet."

"Why," said Gay in an interested voice.

"Because I was in the middle of having a bath."

"Darling, how grim!" she said. "Go away and finish having your bath and then come back and ring me up."

"Can't you tell me what you want?"

"Not whilst you drip. I want you in your very best mood. You sounded perfectly ferocious when you asked who I was."

She hung up, and Algy went back to his bath.

When he rang up 10 minutes later she inquired anxiously after his temper.

"I thought it sounded quite feverish just now."

"It's in the pink," said Algy.

"Really? Because I want to ask you something, and I'd rather know beforehand if you're likely to blow up."

"No explosives on the premises," Algy assured her. "You wrong me, my child. I am known as Algernon, the man who never lost his temper."

"How awful that sounds! Has anyone really ever called you Algernon?"

"My grandmother did. I can just remember her saying, 'Here are three pennies, Algernon. Do not spend them all at once.'"

"And did you?"

"Of course. And then she died and left me a tidy sum of money, bless her. Did I ring you up to talk about grandmothers? I mean, you only wanted to talk about being blackmailed," Algy countered.

"What is it this time?"

"Cars," said Gay in a burst of confidence. "I mean your car. I mean—"

"What do you mean? You're not getting anywhere, you know."

"Well, that's just what I want to do. I want to get somewhere, and I don't see how I can without a car, and—I wondered—whether you'd lend me yours—"

Algy said quite slowly, "You want me to lend you my car. When?"

"Tonight," said Gay.

"Can you drive? Have you got a license?"

"I've got a license. I've had lessons."

Algy burst out laughing. "My child, if bent on suicide, why involve my Bentley?"

A very small voice came back to him.

"I don't know. I thought perhaps—you would—"

Algy was smitten. She sounded like a forlorn child. He said, "My dear, don't be idiotic. If you want to go anywhere, I'll drive you—you know that."

He could feel her hesitation.

And then her voice: "I don't know. Algy, would you—would you really?"

"Of course I would. I will."

He heard her catch her breath. "And not ask questions, or want to know where I'm going and what it's all about?"

"I'm afraid I'll have to know where you're going or I can't get you there, Gay, what's this all about? Can't you tell me?"

"No—no, I can't—I'll have to find some other way."

"What time do you want to start?"

"I think about 10. It'll take about two hours. I want to be there by 12."

An almost inaudible whistle escaped from Algy.

"Is this an all-night show?"

"Oh, I don't think so. I think we ought to be back by three."

"Gay!"

She found words suddenly.

"Algy, don't know why you should. There isn't any reason really. But I've got to, and it would make all the difference to know you were there—standing by. Only I can't tell you anything, and if you are going to ask questions—"

"I won't," said Algy.

"Because I could go alone."

"You're not going alone," said Algy, and hung up.

Promptly at 10 o'clock Algy picked up Gay.

The Bentley ran smoothly between dark hedgerows. London was a long way behind them.

When Algy asked, "Where do you want to go?" Gay had a map to show him, ready folded.

"The name of the place is Colebrook. It's about 35 miles."

"Then it won't take anything like two hours."

The darkness shut them in. There is always a strangeness about driving at night. To have so small a visible space in which to move and yet to move so fast, to rush upon the dark and see it slide away, receding endlessly upon itself, induces an inertia of the faculties. Thought is in suspense, ready to move again when the spell is broken.

Gay had been in a turmoil. She had been afraid, bold, eager, and afraid again. She had nerved herself to go down to Colebrook. She would have nerved herself to the point of driving a strange Bentley along strange dark lanes. She would presently nerve herself to grope in a dark garden for Sylvia's blackmailer. Because Sylvia simply mustn't be allowed to hand over her husband's papers to Mr. Zero, and the only way of stopping her that Gay could think of was to butt in at the critical moment and scare Mr. Zero off the map. He was bound to be scared if he thought there was a witness to his blackmailing, and it ought to keep him quiet and prevent him from worrying Sylvia again.

Gay had thought it a very good plan in London. Presently at Colebrook she would probably not feel so sure about it.

They came into Colebrook and stopped. One of the little bright yellow signs put up by the A. A. informed them that they had arrived. At a quarter before midnight there would certainly have been no one abroad to settle the question.

Algy said, "Well," and waited. When there was no answer, he said, "What next?"

"I'm trying to think," said Gay.

She had been to Colebrook once when Sylvia was engaged, but it was more than a year ago, and it had been daylight. She had to shut her eyes and call the daylight picture back. She recollected having gone on past the church and along a lane, and then there were big gates, and a stone pillar on either side.

Gay opened her eyes and said: "We've got to find the church."

"Church all present and correct," said Algy—"on the left."

"Then we turn up by it, and there's a lane, and you come to some big gates."

And suppose they were shut. This thought, which might have occurred to Gay in town, bobbed up with horrid suddenness now. You simply can't take a blackmailer by surprise if you have to knock up a lodge and get yourself admitted in a flourish of trumpets.

The gates were open. Gay seemed to remember that the drive was a very long one. She wondered whether she dared let Algy drive her in. It would be nice to feel that he was somewhere near, and it would be very nice not to have to walk up that dark drive all by herself. But could she risk it? She didn't think she could, and when Algy said, "Do we drive in?" she made her voice as firm as possible and said, "No."

UNCLE RAY'S Corner

A LITTLE SATURDAY TALK.

Today I want to take up a subject I have not said much about for a long time, our Scrapbook Club. It is still growing in a good, steady way, and it makes me happy to think of the hundreds of thousands of boys and girls who are clipping our column each day and saving it. There also are a large number of adults who are keeping scrapbooks, either for children whom they care about, or for themselves.

The idea of the Scrapbook Club is to lead more and more readers to save the stories. There is no charge to join the club, and no fee to pay while you are a member.

Because of the great number of members, living in many places, we do not have general meetings. There are, however, branch clubs here and there. Some have only half a dozen members, while others have from 25 to 30 members.

To many letters come to me that I could never have space enough to print them all. Here are paragraphs from just a few:

"I have been a member of your club for just about a year, and have enjoyed it very much. I read and saved your Corner before I decided to join the club. Then a friend told me how much fun it was to belong to the club, so I joined it. Now I know I shall never regret that I did."

"MICKEY NELSON."

"I am not old enough to write a long letter, so mother is doing it for me. I am having lots of fun making my scrapbook. I have one nearly full, and on the back we wrote 'Uncle Ray, Volume I. Soon I will start another. When I am a big boy, I can look in them and find out many things.'"

"CRANE BENNETT."

"I am writing to thank you for the directions for making a scrapbook. Most of the children in my neighborhood have seen my leaflet, and they want me to send for directions for them, too. We are going to have a club. We would like to have a big picture of you and your life history. There will be eight members in our club at the start."

All readers are welcome to join the Scrapbook Club. To join, all you need do is to send me a stamped envelope addressed to yourself. This envelope will be used in mailing the Scrapbook Club membership certificate and the direction leaflet back to you. Please write carefully, giving full name and address so there will be no mistake in the mails.

"MARIE NICKEL."

TARZAN THE FEARLESS

No. 78

Jeff raised his rifle slowly and took a preliminary sight. Tarzan was 100 feet away to offer an easy target. Now Nkima saw his friend Tarzan approaching, and he saw Jeff's action. The little monkey knew well the meaning of the deadly thunder-stick.

Immediately Nkima set up a fearful screaming and chattering. Mary turned quickly and ran to the mouth of the cave. She, too, saw the distant Tarzan, and Jeff's rifle. "What are you doing?" she demanded. "I'm going to shoot him," Jeff answered sullenly.

"He's our enemy," the man added; "he's probably coming to kill me and steal you." Mary was dismayed. She trusted Tarzan; she believed that in him rested the only hope of saving her father and Bob Mason, the man she loved. She must not let them die!

"Jeff," she pleaded, "spare Tarzan, and I'll marry you." Jeff looked up. For a moment he weighed his decision. He wanted this girl; but he wanted, too, the giant emeralds which would be his reward for Tarzan's capture—or death. Which did he prize most?

The world is full of John Joneses (fellows just like us) who make good use of the classified section of The Constitution through almost every important stage of life: To buy that first bicycle for that first job; to borrow a little money, maybe, to get married on; to find a cute little home for the bride; to furnish it for her; to hunt a better job; to get a weebed when the baby is born; to find a maid for the wife; to "trade in" the old car; to sell the old folk's farm. Special Programs and Revivals Scheduled by Atlanta Churches

Straw Vote on Methodist Merger Will Be Taken at Calvary; Dr. Harvey to Mark Anniversary at Gordon Street Baptist.

Anniversary services, continuation of revivals and opening of new series of special services, musical programs and lectures by nationally known speakers are scheduled by Atlanta churches tomorrow.

A vote on unification of the two branches of Methodism will be held at the morning service tomorrow in the Calvary Methodist church, Dr. Walt Holcomb, pastor, announced yesterday. Dr. Holcomb will read the proposed plan before the congregation before the service.

The evening service will be featured by a sermon on civic righteousness by Dr. Holcomb. He will discuss the indictment of Pee Wee Burns and the social significance of the grand jury investigation.

First anniversary of the pastorate of Dr. T. F. Harvey at the Gordon Street Baptist church will be celebrated tomorrow morning. Buren C. Smith, Sunday school superintendent, said the Sunday

Tuskegee Concert Will Include Songs of the Old and New South

When the Tuskegee choir comes to Atlanta for a concert engagement at 8:30 o'clock Wednesday night at the city auditorium, musical lovers of the city will have an opportunity to hear one of the best known ensembles of its kind in America. William L. Dawson, the director, is a musician of unquestioned ability.

Songs of the old south and of the new south will be sung by the Tuskegee group, many of the latter being arrangements by Dawson, who is distinguished as the composer of the only known negro folk symphony, an opus featured recently by Leopold Stokowski in one of his Philadelphia concerts.

Members of the Tuskegee choir, more than a hundred in number, are all known by their full names by their director. While a student

STUDENT PASTOR TO BE INSTALLED

Rev. Cecil B. Lawter Will Take Inman Park Presbyterian Pastorate.

The Rev. Cecil B. Lawter, 26-year-old senior at Columbia Seminary, Decatur, will be installed formally as pastor of the Inman Park Presbyterian church at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Since last July, Mr. Lawter has acted as supply pastor of the church and during that time many new members have joined the congregation. He was ordained Tuesday at the quarterly meeting of the Atlanta Presbytery, meeting at the seminary, where he will graduate in June.

Born in Spartanburg, S. C., he was reared there, graduating from Westford College in 1935. He came to Decatur three years ago to attend the seminary. He is married and has one son, David Lawter, 3. The commission appointed by the moderator to conduct the services tomorrow includes the Rev. E. J. Spaulding, of Atlanta, as moderator; Dr. J. Spaulding, of Atlanta, who will preach the sermon; the Rev. Harold C. Smith, who will charge the new minister; Elder C. D. Montgomery, who will charge the congregation; and the Rev. T. F. Burgess, who will lead in prayer.

DEFEAT PREDICTED FOR CHURCH UNION

Laymen Believe Unification Proposal Will Disrupt the Methodists.

Defeat of the proposed plan to unite the northern and southern branches of the Methodist church was predicted yesterday by officials of the Laymen's Organization for the Preservation of the Southern Methodist church on the basis of four developments. Reasons listed by the laymen are as follows:

1. Despite the fact that the majority of the delegates were hand-picked by the church, there has been within the last few weeks an ever-increasingly great number of delegates who, while favoring unification, have come to the opinion that such action will disrupt the church and prove disastrous.

2. Practically every church membership in the south that has been polled has shown an overwhelming vote against the plan, ranging from 90 per cent in the rural churches to 65 per cent in metropolitan churches.

3. Hundreds of official boards of stewards have definitely gone on record in opposition.

4. The general laity are against the plan because no vote has been allowed them, there has been no understanding of the plan, and its provisions seem imperfect, obscure and doubtful. The membership generally desire that, even though unification be considered, the question be first submitted to the membership at large.

Dr. James W. Lipscomb, president of the laymen's organization, warned that "our church dies" if the plan is adopted.

There will be 471 delegates attending the general conference in Birmingham and 158 will be required to defeat the proposal, officials said.

Meanwhile, arrangements were being completed for a conference of representative laymen of the south who will meet with Collins Denny Jr., of Richmond, Va., for a luncheon tomorrow at the Henry Grady hotel.

POST MORTEM ORDERED IN DEATH OF WORKER

A post mortem will be held this morning at Grady hospital to determine cause of the death of Louis Virgil Hayes, 34, of 695 Wheeler street, N. W., who died at the hospital early last night while retaining consciousness.

Hayes, a molder in a steel mill, was taken to the hospital from his home. He is survived by his wife; a son, Donald; three daughters, Barbara, Patricia and Juanita; a brother, J. R. Hayes, and two sisters, Mrs. L. F. Smallwood and Mrs. Clarence Hunt.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

SUPER-HIGHWAY URGED FOR OLD SPANISH TRAIL

SAN ANTONIO, April 22.—(AP)—A resolution calling on congress to establish a super-highway system along the route of the Old Spanish Trail was adopted today by the Old Spanish Trail Association in annual convention here.

The resolution called for a four-lane highway stretching from St. Augustine, Fla., on the east coast to San Diego, Cal., on the west coast. The estimated cost approximately $8,000,000, was proposed.

Church people of Atlanta are taking an active interest in the forthcoming event, especially following its endorsement the past week by Dr. C. R. Stauffer, president of the Christian Council of Atlanta, and the Rev. Lester Rumble, president of the Evangelical Ministers' Association.

Tuskegee officials were here recently in conference with Dr. Louis D. Newton, chairman of the committee sponsoring the coming concert, along with the other members of the central sponsoring body.

Church people of Atlanta are taking an active interest in the forthcoming event, especially following its endorsement the past week by Dr. C. R. Stauffer, president of the Christian Council of Atlanta, and the Rev. Lester Rumble, president of the Evangelical Ministers' Association.
